The effort to re-open the Southern Oregon State Normal School at Ashland seems to have secured the quite general support of the counties of Southern Oregon. This fact should help that effort, for the people of the state have too long considered the state's schools as means of passing out "spoils" from the state treasury to the several localities where they are situated.

The school was in operation under biennial appropriations from the legislature for fourteen years. In the session of 1909 the appropriation bill after passing the house, failed in the senate, and the regents were without authority to continue the school. The plant consists of two main school buildings, women's dormitory, men's dormitory, gymnasium, library, heating plant and considerable equipment—all of this the property of the state of Oregon and free from indebtedness or incumbrance of any kind. The school is under the State Board of Normal School Regents, a board appointed from citizens of counties having no state educational institution, hence its management in the interest of the entire state is assured. No citizen of Jackson county is on the board.

The committee behind this effort, composed of prominent citizens from each of the seven counties of Southern Oregon, emphasizes three points in their argument for the re-establishment of the school.

They point out, first, that a Normal school is not a school of high education, but is for the sole purpose of training teachers in the common schools.

Second, that the state spends over $5,000,000 annually on its common schools and that, from a standpoint of economy alone, this school should be maintained that the common schools may have trained teachers. In other words, that this $5,000,000 of taxpayers' money shall be spent through teachers who know their business. The efficiency of our common school teachers should be of prime concern to the citizen. He employs a clever lawyer; he is particular about the doctor he calls in. How much more particular he should be with the ability of the trainer of his children.

President Campbell of the State University says: "There could be no greater extravagance than that of spending large sums of money on public schools which are 'kept' by untrained teachers."

Third, it is pointed out that the history of every state in the Union proves that all Normal schools (and the same is true to some extent of the colleges) are decidedly local as to their spheres of influence. For instance, the Normal School at Monmouth has only thirteen pupils from the seven counties of Southern Oregon and only thirty-three from the eastern half of the state.

In vain have eastern states undertaken to make one large centrally located Normal School serve all the state. The attendance has come mostly from its immediate neighborhood and the rest of the state has been without the influence of Normal training in its common schools. The result has been that state after state has changed to a policy of taking the school to the people. Oregon is the only state in the Union that ever reduced the number of its Normal Schools. California has eight Normal Schools and 85 per cent of her common school teachers have had Normal training. Oregon has one Normal School. Eighty per cent of last years' applicants for teachers' certificates had no training above the eighth grade.

It is pointed out that the various collateral facts pertaining to a proper location for a Normal School are decidedly favorable in respect to Ashland. Climatically it cannot be surpassed. The size of the town (6000) gives the school a local constituency, which furnishes a substantial basis on which to build as well as to maintain a thoroughly efficient training school. Ashland has one of the finest high schools in the state; it is the oldest high school in the state outside of Portland.

The committee wisely makes little ado about the attitude of Jackson county has taken towards other educational interests in this state; but it is fair to call attention to the fact that in the Normal School vote of 1910 Jackson county gave the largest county majority for the Normal School at Weston and the second largest (Multnomah only exceeding) for the Monmouth Normal. In 1912 the Agricultural College and U. of O. millage bill received the second largest county majority from Jackson; and in 1908 and 1913 the University of Oregon appropriation bills received their third largest (Multnomah and Lane leading) county majority from Jackson county. The vote of other southern Oregon counties was proportionately strong. Their people believe in and support state schools.—Advertisement.
