Bessemer's Ill Luck.

Sir Henry Bessemer was one of those inventors that ill luck pursued and from whose clutches he finally escaped by indomitable perseverance. In 1833 the British government was losing $500,000 a year by the fraudulent misuse of embossed deed stamps. Bessemer rendered this impossible by the use of perforated dies which dated the stamps. He presented the invention to the government, which forgot its promise of a permanent appointment, but thanked him. His great invention in the manufacture of steel so impressed the ironmakers that they paid him $125,000 for licenses and "wanted their money back." He had forgotten the proportion of fools to wise men. It took him two years to render the process "foolproof," and he pressed his patent home by the setting up of his factory in Sheffield.

Turned the Tables.

In his reminiscences Henry Holl-day tells a story of a Londoner, "Remo" Coates, who thought he was a born actor. Coates paid a large sum to be allowed to play Romeo at Drury Lane, where he appeared bedizened with jewels and was received with voluntary applause by a public who appreciated the joke. Some of the young men who were the favored associates of the prince regent connected a practical joke at the expense of Coates.
They got a sheet of the prince's note paper and sent him an invitation to dine at the pavilion. The prince got wind of the trick, and when Coates was ushered in and the jokers were looking to see his discomfiture he turned the tables on them by receiving his visitor with great politeness and giving him a piece of honor.
