How He Learned English.
Wing See some years ago came to New York from San Francisco to see the big city before returning to his native land, where he hoped to live on the money which he had saved. He wanted to learn a little English and rented a room on the east side over a store. He was a quiet man of good habits and soon made himself useful in the store, where he gave his time in exchange for the language experience. After six months he was ready to go to China, and after all arrangements for his trip had been made he went to Chinatown to show his English. He was surprised to find that his English speaking countrymen did not understand him and finally learned to his horror that he had lived in a German district and had learned German by mistake.—New York Tribune.

Not Dead.
The big red touring car struck a pedestrian, rolling him in the mud and maltreating him in general. The owner ran back, greatly excited, after stopping his car.
"Is he dead?" he asked anxiously of the medical man who was attending the victim.
"Oh, no!" replied the doctor cheerfully. "He's not dead. He's merely run down."—Chicago News.

Not Far Her.
"What did you say to him, dad?" "I asked him if he could support you in the style to which you had been accustomed."
"And he?"
"He said he could."
"If he can't he'll divorce him!"—Houston Post.
