The work of filling in rock for the extension of the jetty is progressing regularly. The management is short one barge so they are only working with a one barge force, filling the barge on one side in the forenoon and emptying in the afternoon on the other side of the river. It is not expected that the second barge will be forthcoming until July when the working force will be increased. The contractors in Portland have until the tenth of July to supply the barge and it is not likely the same will be ready for use in the local harbor improvements much before that time. It is thought that the work of filling with rock will last until Dec. 1st.
