When Did Man Begin to Live?

Man was created after all other living things on earth.

And he was given additional powers to Think, Reason and Act, so that he might become ruler of all things.

Motorists began to really live and become supreme beings when they were enabled to get the proper accessories, at the proper prices.

And to have their cars repaired by men who know how.

And those who have fully exercised their thinking and reasoning powers should conclude to continue to live by patronizing the Bandon Garage.

We carry the largest stock of TIRES and accessories in Bandon. And our prices are right.

We may live, without-lovers live, without hope; But civilized women cannot live without soap. We may live without books what is knowledge, but sorrow;

We may live without beauty, it fades on the morrow;

We may live without law suits, indictments are quashing;

First Big Paramount Feature to be Shown at the Grand next Thursday

(Reviewed by W. Stephen Bush) I am glad to dip my pen in the ink of laudation, which of late, has threatened to run dry. "The Ghost Breaker" is one of the few pictures that measure up to the full definition of a great feature. It has, to begin with, the solid substance that makes the feature stand out above the rank and file of films; it has the right qualities of form, the dramatic construction is bold, but clear and consistent, the acting of the principal characters must meet the most exacting expectations, and there is the overshadowing advantage of originality, plus variety.

"The Ghost Breaker" had a long run on the speaking stage but I really believe that its success on the screen will be even greater.

The subject offered extraordinary possibilities to a high class film producer, and it must be said that the Lasky company rose fully to every one of them. To provide an hour's entertainment the producing company has been simply extravagant in its outlay of time, care and money. This ambitious striving, this desire to give the public the best at any cost, finds its reward in keen public appreciation. Audiences at the Grand are critical, but the picture had not been on its way five minutes before I saw the seat of enjoyment on all the faces around me, and after that it was only a question of how great and complete the public approval would be.

The subject itself is one which will strike appeal to an American audience. American home is famous. We love to see the young Americans brush aside the ceremonies and conventions of the old world and go directly to the point. Imagine a haunted castle having any terrors for a young Kentuckian from the feud belt. Here in stately and ceremonious Arragon is a castle containing fabulous treasure. It belongs to an ancient Spanish family which has vainly sought to locate the hidden wealth of its ancestors. The head of the house goes into the castle to search and is never heard of again. The peasants of the country firmly believe that the castle is haunted by evil spirits and none can be found to go near it after dark, let alone enter it. The locket containing an accurate description of the hiding place of the jewels has been stolen by a thievish maid. The locket is traced to New York and the princess of the house of Arragon, bemoaning the disappearance of father and brother, boldly starts out for New York and succeeds in finding a trace of the jewel soon after her arrival.

Through the murder of his father, Warren Jarvis of Kentucky is drawn into the plot. Tracing the murderer to New York he meets and kills him in a New York hotel and effects his escape by entering the room of the princess. Jarvis is so much of a gentleman that he secures the sympathy of the princess who hides him from the detectives and subsequently enlists his assistance in her efforts to solve the mystery of the ancient castle. After many hairbreadth escapes from all sorts of medieval tricks and devices, Jarvis locates the treasure and marries the princess.

just indicated by a huge funnel with the whistle blowing—the whole thing close up. The effect was instantaneous. Never was the action of a play advanced more skillfully. The interior settings were good, a rare thing even in the best of features. One of the cleverest touches in the feature and characteristic of the attention to detail is the descent of the two detectives down the rope ladder from the steamer to their boat below. It is a trifle perhaps but it shows to what lengths the producers have gone to make their work as perfect as possible.

H. B. Warner has made fast friends with the camera and his effort in the "Ghost Breaker" is little short of marvelous. Every part was exceedingly well taken and the minor parts stood out as very clever work. I think the opening scenes were a most unique and entertaining possibilities of double exposure work. The feature gives the exhibitor a chance and a splendid one to show what he can do by way of producing a picture.

Grand Theater, Thursday, July 8.

The fact that the officers of the Southern Oregon Land company had sent in for information as to the amount of their back taxes caused a delightful thrill or two to chase down the backs of the county money holders. It is hinted, however, that the information may be sought and used for further litigation.

The outlook for the dried prune crop of the west coast is not good according to the men familiar with conditions. The crop of California is estimated at one hundred millions and of the northwest at twenty millions more. The United States uses less than one half of this amount the balance having been disposed of in Europe. Germany is generally a large customer for this product.
