AVERILL'S

We Must Wash

We may live without poetry, music and art;
We may live without conscience, may love without heart;
We may live, without lovers live, without hope;
But civilized women cannot live without soap.
We may live without books what is knowledge, but sorrow;
We may live without beauty, it fades on the morrow;
We may live without law suits, indictments are quashing;
But, where is the one who can live without washing

GOLD BEACH GOSSIP

(From the Gold Beach Globe)

The hunting season opened Sunday and the woods and hills are swarming with hunters.

Editor Marsters has been suffering from a twitching of the tiger fingers for several days past. The disease developed to such alarming proportions that nothing short of a good venison steak would save the member from total disuse, so in company with Rev. Short and Dr. Eaton of Roseburg he hit for the high hills Saturday morning with the avowed intention of not returning until all danger of a stiff finger had passed.

W. M. Averill and family of Corvallis father of Moss Averill, are visiting in Curry County. Mr. Averill is one of the old settlers who helped make the early history of Curry County. He was one of the first County Commissioners had two stores, one at Chetco and one at Langlois. He stopped a few days in Gold Beach, then went to Pistol River to visit friends and relatives. All the old settlers are glad to see Averill and talk over old times, recalling the scenes of the past with detailed vividness, while the more recent occurrences are forgotten.

The resignation of John Adams Deputy State Game Warden of Curry County, has been accepted by the State Fish and Game Department.

White Brothers who purchased the farm of Elvin Miller were in town Saturday. They have all the air of old-timers. They have put on fourteen cows are taking their milk to the Wedderburn cheese factory and bringing eggs and other good things to eat to the appreciative people of Gold Beach and Wedderburn.

The many friends of E. A. Boney will be pained to learn that his health is in such a condition that he found it necessary to go to Portland for medical aid. He left on the out going Roamer a few days ago.

P. E. Egan, who died at Gold Beach last Wednesday morning, was one of the old residents of southern Curry, having resided in that end for more than forty years past. By mining and stock raising Mr. Egan, many years ago started the nucleus of the small fortune that he had at the time of his death. He retired from active business about 15 years ago, and has since resided at Gold Beach where he loaned money and speculated in County warrants.

Mr. Egan was born in Ireland 68 years ago. He leaves one brother in the old country and a sister in Massachusetts. He has two cousins in this county Mrs. A. S. Miller and Dennis Cunniff, the former being appointed administrator of his estate, which is estimated to be worth $80,000.

Mr. Egan was stricken with apoplexy shortly after eating supper one evening and passed away at 4 o'clock the following morning the greater part of which time he was unconscious. He died without leaving a will.—Port Orford Tribune.

During the past week a big run of salmon has been coming into Rogue river, and owing to the high price paid for the fish the fishermen there have been making big money. The Wedderburn Trading Company pays 50 cents for salmon caught in the seine and $1 for those caught in set and drifts nets, while the Seaborg cannery pays 75 cents. Last Saturday the seine turned into the Wedderburn company 1600 salmon, and the gill nets about 600, and Sunday night the gill net fishermen delivered 1300 fish to the Wedderburn company and about 700 at Seaborg's, some after the drift boats catching as high as 150 salmon.

There are 25 men on the seine crew, and it will be noted from the above that on last Saturday their earnings amounted to $800. Two men are in each drift boat, and the high boat Sunday night earned about $175. Never before in the history of fishing on lower Rogue have fishermen made such big money, which is accounted for by the high price, caused from competition.

The Wedderburn cannery has been crowded to its full capacity. Last Sunday, to clean up a pile of 2,500 fish, the cannery run from 5 o'clock in the morning until after 10 that night.—Port Orford Tribune

The Tribune editor spent several days at Rogue river the latter part of last week, and while there took occasion to note some of the things that have been done and are being done in the fishing war that is going on in that stream.

While considerable feeling exists among the rival fishermen, yet we believe that the magnitude and seriousness of the situation is enlarged by the reports in the outside press. That a state of anarchy exists on the river, that stock has been maliciously shot down or that a serious attempt was made to burn the Wedderburn cannery do not appear to the writer to be substantiated by facts sufficiently to warrant their assertion. Both sides have probably made their mistakes one of these which lost the Wedderburn company the moral support of a good many citizens of the county was the fencing of their tidelands. While probably within their legal rights in doing this yet the benefits derived by the company from the fence are so small that they are over shadowed by the antagonism aroused by it. Another fact that does not tend to mollify the situation, is, that the County Attorney is said to be receiving a salary from the Wedderburn company, which leads many to believe that a Seaborg fisherman will not receive the same protection from the state that one of the Macleay fishermen will.

While the writer listened to many conflicting stories as to lawlessness yet the only act of this kind that we witnessed was performed by the Seaborg fishermen. This was a pre-meditated and malicious attempt to interfere with a seine haul of the Wedderburn company, by two of the Seaborg drift boats. This interference, we were told on reliable authority, had been worked more successfully on former occasions although in this instance the seine was able to make little better than half a haul. These boats lie in wait, and when the seines start to lay out they drop their gill nets so that the seine goes over or around them, and with their nets once in the sweep of the seine the frightened salmon are caught by the wholesale and the seine has little left when pulled ashore. In the instance witnessed the seine, by changing its course, kept the interference on the outside and when the two boats failed to accomplish their purpose, took in the nets and rowed away with muttered threats.

The State of Oregon permits seining, and so long as it does permit it the Wedderburn company is entitled to the protection of the state in exercising that right. Mr. Macleay is employing home men on the seine and giving them a lay so that they are making exceptionally good wages, when he might import men from the outside $2.50 per day. He is a heavy taxpayer and in every way identified with the interests of the county. So far as the Tribune can learn he is trying to be a law abiding citizen of the county. He owns certain tidelands and river frontage to protect his fishing industry, and naturally is using every legitimate means to prevent a rival company from trespassing upon his grounds.—Port Orford Tribune.

Five suits in connection with the Rogue river fish war clutter the circuit court docket at Gold Beach. The session opens there next Monday and probably will last longer than usual. C. R. Peck, representing the Macleay estate left for Gold Beach today; John D. Goss expects to leave tomorrow there to aid in representing the Seaborg interests. He will work in conjunction with C. H. Buffington, an attorney at Gold Beach and who was here for several months last winter.

Four of the five suits have been instituted by the Macleay people. One of them is brought about by the present location of the Seaborg cannery, the claim being that the building is situated partially within the Macleay property. Another is an injunction suit against B. A. Seaborg and eighty fishermen, the claim being that they maliciously interfered with the nets of the Macleay fishermen and also that they trespassed on the tide lands said to belong to the latter.

A third suit is the contempt proceeding brought against a man named Spencer for the alleged violation of a perpetual injunction.

The Seaborg people have brought suit for $500 on bond put up by the Macleay interests of the time they were granted a temporary injunction which was soon dissolved. They claim they were damaged to the extent of $850 but the bond was only $500 thus limiting them.

Possibly with the coming of the court, law and order in the fishing on Rogue River will be restored and constant allegations of unlawfulness on both sides with threatened bloodshed can be averted.—Coos Bay News.
