SERVICE FIRST!

"Service First" means to us satisfactory telephone communication reaching the greatest number of people in the largest territory with the most efficiency. Since this efficiency depends on the intelligent manipulation of our plant by our employees, their work must be safeguarded. There cannot be an accident which does not directly interfere with service and continuous good service depends on the continuous employment of experienced workers. Therefore "Safety first" becomes the most important factor in "Service First". Every precaution is taken for safety and we have been rewarded by a freedom from serious accidents.

Langlois News Items

From the Curry County Leader.

Mrs. E. E. Cope who has been quite sick this summer departed for Coquille last week where she will receive treatment. Her many friends hope she will speedily recover.

Dr. Lee Pemberton has been retained by the miners of Sixes and will prepare a hospital in Langlois for emergency cases.

Alie Guerin of Floris creek was a passenger on the Clint Malehorn Aeroplane, where Mr. Guerin will take the boat for Portland there he will spend sometime attending to legal business.

Hon Harry Lane, United States Senator, in Congress from Oregon, paid a flying visit into Curry, tarrying very briefly in Langlois, on his way to Port Orford to get first hand knowledge of the needs of the location in the matter of harbor improvements. The Senator was accompanied on the trip by his wife and daughter.

The Leader is informed by J. H. Upton at whose residence in town the Senator called on his way down that he spoke very favorably of the utility and practicality of a proposed short inner construction for the protection of immediate shipping during the months that the harbor is assailed by South West storms. The Senator is reported as saying that by their combined energy and enterprise the people down there have built a substantial wharf, thus showing their faith in the possibilities of their surroundings, and are therefore, the more entitled to recognition at Washington.

While having Port Orford in mind the Leader is reminded that that harbor is also environed by a ribbon of "tide land," and that if any "owner" of a part of such ribbon were mean enough to fence the public away from the water way, such acts would and ought to, end all hope for harbor improvements of any sort.

The proposition to secure an examination by the engineer Department of the outlet into the ocean of Rogue river with a view to ascertain the cost of such improvement of the channel as to render ingress and egress of ships safer, was once a possibility, but now that the harbor is enclosed it would be a draining conspiracy who would chance a criminal proposition for having been "over the fence" a la poor Winograd.

M. M. Young informs the Herald that he is leaving up the Baxter hotel and possession will be transferred to Chas. Baxter within a day or two. Mr. Young intends to retire from the hotel business for a time at least and will make a circuit of Douglas county with the car which he has which he has the agency—Coquille Herald.

BEAUTIFUL OX-EYE DAISY DUBBED WORST OF WEEDS

The Ox-eye daisy is one of the most handsome and popular flowers of the thistle family, but when once established it is also the worst of weeds, troublesome and hard to eradicate. Probably the best way of clearing it from meadows is to mow it after blossoming and before the seeds mature, and curing it for hay, says H. S. Hammond, of the Oregon Agricultural College Botany department. Since the plant blossoms eight or ten days before maturing seed it is easy to cut it while in the best stage for hay, at which time stock eat it fairly well when it is nicely cured.

"In many eastern states," says Professor Hammond, "it has almost complete possession of pastures, making them quite white when in bloom. It spreads chiefly by its seeds, scattered in hay, manure and various farm seeds. It has a perennial root stock from which it continues to propagate itself until killed. Many of these root stocks will die when the plants are mowed during the blossoming period.

"The plant is shallow rooted and may be readily destroyed from a meadow and fields by plowing followed by cultivation. Rotation of crops offers a good means of riddance. If the meadow is to be continued repeated mowings and close pasturing by sheep to prevent blossoming may be continued until the plants die down.

"People who are not yet troubled with this plant should be on their guard against its introduction. While isolated plants appear about the fields and premises they should be dug up before they get established and begin to scatter seed."

MANUAL TRAINING WANTED

Oregon school boards are calling for more teachers of manual training than can be found among those trained to teach the subject. The following available list of O. A. C. graduates of manual arts who are listed with the teachers' appointment committee has been exhausted but demand still continues. In some instances the school boards have asked teachers without preparation for teaching this subject to install a plant and do the best they can. Some of the teachers has urged have avoided themselves of the College facilities for impacting instructing and are working up the proposed course with the help of the College either by correspondence or in person. Others requesting the help of the College department may get it by addressing Frank H. Shepard, O. A. C., Corvallis, Ore.

Being detained in Portland through the making of numerous repairs, the steamer was compelled to enter the bay and did not visit Marshfield last week.

DARBY DOYLE ON ROGUE RIVER TROUBLES

Says Macleay People Made a Mistake and Judge Coke is in Error Regarding the Rights of Fishermen

Mr. M. Doyle for 40 years a resident and owner of 800 acres of land at the mouth of Rogue river, was in the city the past week. Speaking of the complications arising from a recent injunction given the Macleay estate which prevents fishermen from drift netting or seining in the river where the estate owns the abutting property and branding it as trespassing Mr. Doyle said:

"Mr. Macleay is one of my closest friends and I have a great deal of respect for him on account of his splendid personality and showed himself for progressiveness when he invested $250,000 or $300,000 in the Hume estate and is maintaining a modern store and fish cannery at that place. He undoubtedly had the best intentions when he gave up a fortune for the property and whatever he has done was done without doubt with the best intentions. He has, however made a mistake and I have been the first to tell him so.

"He applied to Judge Coke for an injunction restraining anyone from seining or using nets in the river on the property of the estate. The injunction was granted though nothing but riparian rights could be found upon which to base the protection. In granting the injunction Judge Coke has incurred the enmity of a vast majority of the thinking people of our part of the county. The injunction has prevented men who would have stood Macleay's firm defenders from earning a living and he has gained little in a magnificent way. To be sure he has taken advantage of the monopoly and worked his series and nets the best he could but at heavy expense. It is doubtful in my mind that it has proven a more profitable plan than paying fishermen a good rate for their catches and had less expense.

"The company is deserving of credit thought at this time few are willing to take note of any of their good points. The store the company maintains here is one of the best stores in the state and service offered its customers is second to none. Then he is interested in many other lines of enterprise which bring cash into the community. People know that when they sell produce to the Macleay estate their money is good and returns can be depended upon. The wool industry in our section is a growing industry and we find a cash market right at home for all the wool we can bring to town. This should be and is appreciated by every man who has a sheep or a goat and there are plenty of them there.

"As a solution of the vexing problem, and this I have told Mr. Macleay long before I repeated it to anyone else, is that the river be not closed to commercial fishing as has been suggested by some of the people who are opposed to the Macleays but kept open on an equal basis to all. I have lived there as has been said 40 years and have never taken a fish from the river for commercial purposes and never intend to but I believe my observations have been of value to me and I shall insist on Mr. Macleay to follow the suggestion if I can possibly induce him to do so. I propose that the river be thrown open to drift netting only, that seining and set nets be prohibited. This will give the small fishermen who possibly own no more than a few feet of net and an old boat a chance to get onto the river and catch a few of the fish, which nature has so bountifully provided that stream with. It will also give the Macleay people a chance to operate as many drift nets as they care to, there being equal rights to all. The monopoly will be done away with and peace and prosperity will prevail whereas chaos and strife make life miserable and creates business stagnation.

"Of all the men who have come to the Rogue river and set themselves up as fish dealers, the Macleays have proven to be the most substantial and there are many of us down there who are glad they are there but want them to change their policies. We have had many mushroom dealers and as a result many a poor hard working fisherman has worked night after night in an honest effort to provide for his family only at the last moment to find he has been dishonestly dealt with loses it all"—Coos Bay Harbor.

Coos Bay News Nuggets

M. Doyle of Waderburn, a pioneer of Coos and Curry counties, was here last week on his first trip to the bay in five years. He visited his daughter Mrs. E. P. Mather, and other relatives at North Bend. "Darby" is nearly 70 years old and well preserved for his age but of course is not as spry as he was in 1873 when the writer first met him in the hills at the head of Bear creek, on the lower Coquille.

From lack of financial support, the Coos Bay Concert Band, which for five years was an organization that Marshfield and Coos Bay generally was justly proud of, has been disbanded. The band was about $400 in debt, but the members plan to sell some of the band property, and it is also proposed to give a big dance, which will probably make up the deficit. The matter of the city paying $160 per month towards the support of the band favorably voted on by the people of Marshfield over two years ago but discontinued recently by the city, was brought before the council at a meeting held last night, and a resolution was offered that the stipulated sum again paid to the band. The vote of the council on the resolution resulted in a tie. Ferguson, Cook and Everett favoring it, while Albrecht, Cople and Kimball were against it.

A two point buck paid the residents on West Marshfield a visit Saturday afternoon. The deer didn't seem a bit frightened, and after walking over some of the lawns started back for the woods, going in the direction of Fern Park. He was allowed to depart in peace.

The little tug Bermuda, which was used as a tender to the dredge Seattle left the bay Thursday morning, with a double crew on board, bound for Seattle. They expected to reach Puget Sound Sunday, provided they didn't encounter a heavy northwester on the trip up.

While Mike Burch, telephone line man, was crossing the old Joe Nay slough bridge, in the South slough vicinity, with a team on Wednesday last a section of the bridge gave way and driver and team were thrown into the slough. Mr. Burch escaped with a few bruises, and the horses also managed to reach shore. The water in the slough was seven feet deep.

When Inspector McGrath came to visit the boatmen of the Coquille he came to the opinion that the news of his coming must have preceded him. Most of the boats he found were either tied up or had been put in ship shape for he could find no fault with them. On Coos Bay it was different and he found numerous infractions of the regulations.

The Panama-Pacific Exposition Company has announced the presentation of two "highest awards" to the Southern Pacific Company for its participation in the Fair. One is the highest award for "railway rack, equipment, motive power and safety first appliances" and the other is the highest award for traffic promotion. They come in the nature of two banners, specifying why they were given and bearing the official Panama-Pacific ribbon.

The railway track, equipment, motive power and safety first appliances of the railroad company are on exhibit in the Transportation building, and include, among other things, the old C. P. Huntington, first Central Pacific locomotive. In striking contrast to this, one of the oldest locomotives in the United States, is one of the company's big Mallet engines used on the Tehachapi.

The traffic promotion exhibit is contained in the company's own building at the head of Palm Avenue near the Fillmore Street entrance. There are rest rooms for men and women, the "Glad", with a miniature reproduction of noted scenic spots along the Southern Pacific, ticket office and the Sunset Theater, with motion pictures, illustrated lectures and organ recitals daily. Visitors are Company's guests, everything being free.

Isaac Fishman, a Coos River fisherman who was sick unto death with cancer of the throat spent his last cent to reach his only daughter at Spring, Mass. He arrived in Massachusetts and died two days after his arrival there.
