Blair Stanley, still infatuated with the beautiful but unscrupulous Vivian Marston, persisted, despite his mother's views to the contrary, that he would marry no one else. Knowing, however, that such a marriage had taken place, Mrs. Stanley decided that it was her duty to break it off, and lost no time in consulting her attorneys as to the best and most convenient way of carrying out her scheme. Blair, she determined, must marry Esther Stanley, whom she knew to be rightfully entitled, not only to the estate of her father, the late Colonel Arthur Stanley, but above all, the Diamond from the Sky, the whereabouts of which, at that moment, were as remote as hades itself.

"Blair you must marry Esther," she pleaded, as she prepared for the reception of the guests coming to attend the garden party to be given that afternoon in honor of her son's return from a "business" trip to the coast. "I demand that you listen to me in this instance. Forget the past. Esther loves you. She has told me so." Blair always willing to please his mother—when he was to gain personally—consented.

Richmond's younger set swarmed to the party at which Blair was Esther's constant companion. But Esther intuitively felt that Blair's presence and prostrations of love were prompted by some ulterior motive. Her only thought was of Arthur. Unsuccessful in his efforts to sell the Stanley secret to those he deemed financially interested enough to pay his price, Luke Lovell decided to hunt up Arthur. Penniless, he stole aboard a west-bound freight leaving Richmond the afternoon of his turn down by Blair. On the stretch of track, bordering the sun-baked prairie, a brakeman, whose sympathies were as absent as his hair, ordered Lovell from the train, and when he attempted to bargain, a brutal kick sent him tumbling into the ashes of the road-bed.

Semi-delirious, the gypsy stumbled along the tracks and on across the sand, falling unconscious amid a growth of prairie grass. How long he lay there Lovell did not know. It seemed days, but in reality was only a few hours. As he woke, he found himself staring at a coiled snake, preparing to strike. Beside it was a shining something—The Diamond from the Sky. Greedily, he reached and wound his fingers about it. In a flash the reptile struck. Lovell groaned and sank in a heap. Arthur, returning to the ranch found him there that night. His crude western treatment successfully held off the spread of the poison from the bite. For hours, Arthur remained at the stricken man's side, ministering to his wants, and when about to depart—Lovell having fully recovered—Arthur placed in his hand a roll of bills, securing from Lovell his promise that he would keep his whereabouts to himself.

An Indian and his squaw, the latter with her pappoose, slowly making their way across the prairie, stopped to pitch their camp for the night near the skeleton of the horse. And there it was she found a golden chain at one end of which gleamed a great white stone. Its value meant nothing to these children of the plains, excepting that it afforded the laughing pappoose a new plaything.

Arthur, rich from many successful business deals, realized that the oil wells of California represented an excellent investment, and decided to desert the ranch. The morning of his departure, found the herders gathered about his cabin, imploring him to continue in his work. It was a painful parting for Arthur who had grown to look upon these rough herdsmen with ever increasing admiration and with whom he had spent the many weary months of his exile in the far west. In the town, Arthur stopped to replace the herder's outfit with a suit of the latest model of store clothes, the first he had donned in months, and then, after a hurried leave-taking, rushed to the depot in time to catch the night train. On his way across the continent, Arthur penned a guarded letter to Esther, addressing it to Mrs. Stanley's colored maid.

It had been a sultry day and Esther, her head afebrile, sought the solitude of her room. There it was the maid found her and delivered Arthur's letter. Esther read and reread it, before secreting it in her bosom. Insulted and pestered by the unwelcome attention of Blair and the spying of his mother, she determined to seek out Arthur and tell him all. That night, by means of a pre-arranged signal, Quabba, ever faithful servant, waited as she clambered down the vines, stretching from her window.

Supported by the loyal servant, she hurried across the lawn and stepped into a waiting cab and, with Quabba, hurried to the station, the first move in search of the one she loved.

Battle Is Accused of Being Detective

Former Bandonian Gets In Bad at Marshfield—Rumor Has It He Is an Official Sleuth.

R. S. Battle, better known locally as "the piano man," has been doing the sensational at Marshfield of late and for lack of a better subject the press has been giving him preferred position in the police court review. Mr. Battle, who is big like Jack Johnson, is said to have acted "unbecomingly a decent piano man" in the presence of a rooming house landlady. She called the police and when Chief Carter arrived on the scene the accused became very indignant and proceeded to land on the Chief's jaw. The latter however returned the compliments with his "billy," and after due submission Battle was escorted to the city blockhouse. A $25 fine was assessed which friends paid after the victim of law and order had spent a day or two behind the walls.

Now comes the story that Battle is a sleuth, yea, a real detective, in the employ of county officials. For what, no one seems to guess, but the Record says "the fact that several parties have been informed to look out for him is indication he is looking up evidence of some sort for future reference." Sheriff Johnson, who has a reputation for using the utmost discretion in the selection of his under-officers, apparently does not want credit for having the alleged gum-shoer on his payroll, for he has made the following statement: "R. S. Battle is not in any manner connected with the sheriff's office; he has not been getting any evidence for this office and I know nothing about him. If Battle is posing as an officer and I hear about it I shall see that he is picked up speedily."

Local people who know Battle consider it a huge joke to mistake him for anything.

BANDON DRUGGIST PLEASES CUSTOMERS

C. Y. Lowe reports customers greatly pleased with the QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-I-ka. This simple remedy drains the old foul matter from the bowels so THOROUGH that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation or gassy stomach. It is so powerful that it is used successfully in appendicitis. Adler-I-ka never gripes and the INSTANT action is surprising.

REVENUE MUST COME FIRST

Hawley Says Congress Will Have Big Question to Solve in Finance.

Congressman Hawley who left this week for Washington stated that while he will be particularly interested in legislation affecting the O. & C. land grant, there will be no issue before Congress more important than how to raise revenue for the operation of the government. "This matter of raising revenue is of first consequence because of the heavy expenses which other legislation will involve. Of course, there is the program for military preparedness for self-defense, which will mean about $100,000,000 a year. Then there is the Panama canal, which is proving a liability instead of an asset."

POSTCARDS MUST BE NEUTRAL

Contempt For England or The Kaiser Cannot Be Mailed Openly.

Uncle Sam is neutral in this war clear down to its remotest country postoffice, therefore any attempt to send a friend or an enemy a postcard "Gott Strafe England" or "To Hell With The Kaiser", you are going to be up against the censors. In the east such matter has been mailed out on postcards, but Mr. Burleson has called it off and there will be no more of it gain admittance to the mails. Bandon's postoffice has also been informed.

Made Over Again

Mrs. Jennie Miner, Davidson, Ind., writes: "I can truthfully say Foley Cathartic Tablets are the best I have ever used. They are so mild in action. I feel like I had been made over again." They keep stomach sweet, liver active and bowels regular. They banish constipation, indigestion, biliousness, sick headache. Orange Pharmacy.

Went to the Hospital

C. E. Blanchard, postmaster, Blanchard, Cal., writes: "I had kidney trouble so bad I had to go to the hospital. Foley Kidney Pills completely cured me." Men and women testify they banish lame back, stiff joints, sore muscles and sleep disturbing bladder ailments. Orange Pharmacy, local dealer.

"STRICT ENFORCEMENT OF PROHIBITION LAW"

Aspirant to Prosecutor's Office in Coos Would Clamp Lid Down Hard.

I. N. Miller, a Marshfield attorney, in a letter to Western World, announces his candidacy on the Republican ticket for the nomination for the office of District Attorney. He says in part: "I believe in the strict enforcement of the prohibition law; the maximum penalty for bootleggers, the penitentiary for procurers, and the discouragement of juvenile sex crimes by the prompt punishment of all persons contributing to the delinquency of minors."

Seaman's Law Modified

A ruling on the language test required by the new seamen's law, made Friday by the department of commerce at Washington will minimize the rigidity of that provision which has been much complained of by shipping interests. It orders the customs collectors to make no examinations if the master of a vessel certifies that his crew fulfills the requirements, and that sufficient knowledge of language to insure obedience to orders given in the usual line of duty is the only test to be required.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts through the Mucous Surfaces of the System thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Cure that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address: F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by all Druggists, 75c.

Service First

A long distance telephone conversation may cost twenty-five cents between near by towns or twenty-five dollars across the continent. The rate is based on the cost of rendering service and not on the benefit value to the public. Therefore, the economic saving to the business world is incalculable. It may, in a particular case, be only worth twenty-five cents. Then the public gets value received. But think of the "two-bit" calls which are worth a dollar or ten dollars or a hundred dollars in the saving of expense and time to the parties. Think of all you are GETTING FOR NOTHING. Make free use of the telephone and gain for YOURSELF and YOUR business these DIVIDENDS OF SERVICE which are being declared for the public every day.
