Who Pays?

(Story No. 2 of the Series)

Surprisingly Rita fingered the coins in her purse as she admired the ladies' finery in a show window. She knew her father would not approve of an expenditure for such finery, but she was in a rebellious mood. That day, had her father not written a scorching letter to Jim White—her Jim—which burned with invectives against the "rich backslider of the church who presumed to ask the hand of his daughter in marriage." Yes, Rita, desired the beautiful ribbons and dresses. She wanted to dress as nice as other girls—and she was rebellious.

Back in her home she was busy tearing off her old clothes, pinning ribbons in her hair before the mirror; when the stern hand of Rev. Deane, her father, who came late her room, wrenched them away. She thought of Jim, and that he would be waiting for her at their trysting place. Bitterness toward her father consumed her and she determined to leave the home place forever—a half hour later she was Mrs. James White.

Then came a new life. A continual round of suppers dances and parties. Soon she laid aside all restraint and was recognized as the leader of the smart set of the town.

Jim felt pangs of misgiving when while playing with Billy, the neighbor's son: "Some day we'll have a Billy all our own," and she replied: "I don't know, Jim, I'm not more than a child myself." They drifted farther and farther apart, and then the inevitable quarrel. She sat listlessly thinking, when little Billy came: "I'm Billy, do you have a little Billy, too? Is your little boy lost found her radiant, as she told him of Billy's visit; and with a glad understanding he took her in his arms blushing rosy, with the gayest trickling laughter, retreating, yet only too eager to be caught, Rita ran from him in equitery. There was a ripping sound of lace as her head caught in her gown, tripping her. With a dull thud she landed in heap at the foot of the stairs. She was a brave little patient; brav through the days of preparation and during the operation.

"Yes," the doctor was saying, "the operation has been a success and in a few days everything will be as it was before except the happiness of motherhood can never—"

Like threads of steel her finger gripped her husband's wrist. "She must be alone," the doctor said. Alone: Her eyes stared into space a hard and bitter look upon her face as she sat listening, listening for the baby footsteps she would never hear. Who pays?

Scene From "THE PLUNDERER", a Fox Feature Presenting William Farnum, the $100,000 Movie Star.

"THE PLUNDERER"
William Fox Feature of 500 Wonderful Scenes.—Grand, Dec. 10.

"The Plunderer" affords for William Farnum a real "Farnum part." Big Bill Matthews of the Croix D'Or mine, a doughty, splendid steel-knit fellow, with a big warm heart and a punch in each hand. Bill and his partner are harassed by a secret enemy who imprisons them in a mine shaft, causes a strike of the workmen and blows up the reservoir upon which the power of the mine depends. These are only a few of the thrills portrayed that keep you hanging to the arms of your seat. The final climax where Big Bill and his partner discover their enemy is the most stirring of all.

A pulse-stirring battle with bare fists in which Big Bill beats a score of drink-crazed miners in a fight, that for sheer thrills and heart-catching excitement has never been excelled on stage or screen, is one of the big features of this super picture. Then, too, there is a splendid double love story which leaves a happy glow in the spectator's mind. In fact the "Plunderer" is as perfect a photoplay as has yet been achieved and deals with clean, manly men, affecting sentiment, the lust for yellow gold and swift, dynamic drama. Shown at the Grand Theatre, Friday, Dec. 10.

SHORT, FULL AND YOUTHFUL SPRING STYLES FOR WOMEN
Less Goods and Less Variation in Colors and Textures on Account of War.

"Back to the days of our youth" will be the slogan of women the coming spring, so if you see your better half or your daughter come out in still shorter and fuller skirts, don't be alarmed. It is only the very latest for the coming season. The style committee of the National Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers' association, last week decreed that woman's wear shall be "short, full and youthful." Skirts will be short and full and coats will be cut shorter. Because of lack of materials and dye-stuffs due to the war, colors and textures will be less varied.

Beginning Monday, December 13, until Christmas, Boyle Jewelry Co. will be open evenings.
