POLITENESS TO CHILDREN

Parents should be polite to their children, for the simple reason that it will be found the best example possible in the end.

It is, indeed, a duty of all parents to their children. The bad manners of American children is said to be notorious. If this statement be true, it is not the fault of the children. The responsibility must rest with American parents. If our children have bad manners it is mainly because those in authority over them set them such striking examples of bad manners. Yet it can not justly be said that as a people Americans are bad mannered. Many strangers, visitors to our land, have borne witness repeatedly to courtesy received and kindnesses observed. We are thought to be rather genial, frank, open people; the very vastness of our country lending us, it is admitted, a certain generosity and self-reliance, and the democracy of our form of government giving every man that sense of self respect which is one of the foundations of good manners.

It cannot then be said—speaking very generally of course—that we are wont to behave ourselves with discourtesy toward others. So it is not usually from his observations of our treatment of others that the child has his lessons in bad manners; he has them, rather, from a source more likely to impress him, he has them from the bad manners we practice toward him.

To others he sees us kind and very courteous, with a special courtesy. He notices that we are markedly polite to visitors, noticeably considerate of guests or casual strangers. His mind making its logical deductions, reasons that manners and courtesies are things to be put on and off; to be assumed at need, or neglected at will, and since it is others who reap the benefit of them, and not himself, he acquires logically enough a distaste for them, and looks upon them as affectations more or less, and insincerity. To discard or scorn them himself is, then, a kind of virtue in his eyes; and to have nothing to do with them is warrant in his own downrightness.

This, more often than not, is the real basis of bad manners in our children. If the child were spoken to with the same gentleness and courtesy with which he finds us speaking to strangers and visitors, he would like good manners without doubt, and would imitate them. If the home were as well ordered and as courteously conducted for its inmates as it is on those occasions when guests are present, we would have no problem for the children's manners to wrestle with.

Treat the children always with courtesy by setting them an example.

A DIFFERENCE IN VIEWS

"Thou shalt be tolerant of the hasty word of thy brother, for verily he is not as tactful as thou, who never sinneth in this regard."

What a wisdom of truth is expressed in those few brief lines; and such a summing up of the workings of the human mind! "Thou shalt be tolerant of the hasty word of thy brother, for verily he is not as tactful as thou."

One is prone to believe the person who coined those few words of wisdom is not aware of the consciousness with which he summed up one of the greatest of human failings. How many of us are there who are tolerant of the hasty words of others? At times it would seem the number of such in our various acquaintanceships is so small it could easily be reckoned on the fingers of the hand. Human nature is a complex proposition; filled with whims and varied view points—quick to find what in its various views are considered faults—and seldom always courteous and fair with regard to the opinions of others. When another's view on any subject agrees with one's own, the latter usually classes the former as broad-minded

HIS HOME TOWN PAPER

When the evenin' shades is fallin' on the endin' of the day
And a fellow rests from labor, smokin' in 'at his pipe o' clay,
There's nothin' does him so much good, be fortune up or down,
As the little country paper from his old home town.

It ain't a thing of beauty, an' its print ain't always clean,
But it straightens out his temper when a feller's feelin' mean,
It takes the wrinkles off his face, and brushes off the frown,
That little country paper from his old home town.

It tells all the parties an' the balls of Pumpkin row,
'Bout who spent Sunday with his girl and how the crops'll grow;
How it keeps a fellow posted 'bout who is up and who is down,
That little country paper from his old home town.

Now, I like to read the dailies, an' the story papers, too,
An' at times the yaller novels an' some other trash,—don't you?
But when I want some readin' that'll brush away the frown, and wise; but just as soon as there is a variation noticed the opposite is generally true. Humanity becomes intolerant and quick to denounce. And tactfulness, which is only courtesy in expression appears to be forgotten.
I want that little paper from my old home town.

And then the irony of it all—"as thou, who never sinneth in this regard". Such a word of satire! Was there ever a one of us who in his intolerance could see that we were intolerant; and that we were not tactful in our expression. How many heartaches; how many friends have been estranged—all because of a lack of tolerance and tact!

Read anew that brief paragraph and in the light of a better understanding, grant in your own mind that all of us have an inherent right to form an opinion on any subject that shall differ from your own.

As long as Mr. Nielson maintains that goods of equal quality can be purchased as cheaply from mail order houses as local dealers can purchase them from wholesalers, there is not much use for further discussion. Western World, like all others who favor "home trading," does not believe that it can be done, therefore until positive proof is submitted it reserves any further argument.

SELF-CONSCIOUSNESS

Self-consciousness is a stumbling block that many persons find it difficult to overcome, and unless it is overcome it stands forever in our path a menace to our happiness and to our material welfare. When we are conscious of ourselves we seldom act naturally. Without intending to do so, perhaps, we place self before other interests; it looms up all along our path and casts its shadow upon us in such a manner as to blot out our best chances for happiness—that disregard for self which makes life count for the most. Once we forget to think of our individual failings and lose the fear of what kind of an impression we shall make upon those about us the more likely we shall be to make a better and more favorable impression.

We cannot be one person today and another person tomorrow. Such a course prevents us from developing normally and makes us altogether too self-conscious for our own good. The quality of being natural is one well within the reach of all, yet, for some unaccountable reason, there are persons everywhere who seem to have so little confidence in their natural ability to make a good impression that they try very hard to appear other than they really seem. They seem to look down upon certain qualities which are natural to them and to try to do all in their power to efface them and develop others instead, when very probably the former traits can ill be spared—Charleston News and Courier.

To Register Four Miles

In reporting the official registrar for Four Mile precinct, District No. 52, in last week's issue the name of C. W. F. Blumenrother was given. It should have read Col. C. T. Blumenrother, who is the former's father. The latter is prepared to register now at his residence and later will announce dates on which he will be at the Four Mile hall and at the New Lake school house, so as to make it as convenient as possible for voters in every corner of the precinct.

Gold Beach to Incorporate

A movement is on foot to bring about the incorporation of the town of Gold Beach. Although it is one of the oldest towns along the coast, and a county seat for 50 years, it has never been incorporated.

Bunker Hill doesn't care to become a part of the incorporated city of Marshfield, according to a vote taken at a public meeting at that place Friday evening.

LOCAL CHARACTERS

"Every small town," writes Helen Smith Dayton in Cartoons Magazine, "has a fat boy. Howard is the name of the fat boy in most small towns. Of course he is never called Howard outside of the home circle. Up to the age of 14 years he is called 'Fatty,' and after that he is usually called 'Butch.' Howard is usually seen munching an apple. His favorite sport is riding around on the grocer's wagon with Bill Chidsey, who delivers. When 'Fatty's' father falls heir to a little money he buys Howard a pony, and he is also the most successful raiser of rabbits and white mice of any boy in town.

"The townspeople call Chet Molehill a character. By profession he is a handy man. Men who are urged to do something 'around the place,' always say, 'Oh, get Chet Molehill to do it.' If Chet can be lured away from his seat on an empty box he will mow a lawn, hang a screen door, turn an ice cream freezer, get up on a ladder and whitewash the kitchen ceiling, beat rugs, put down straw matting, wash windows, clean a well, work in the garden, or shovel snow. He prefers to work around the livery stable where there is more going on and no woman 'to boss' him. Chet can always find the coolest spot in summer and the warmest corner in winter."
