Rising Land Values Cause of High Cost of Living

(From the Great Divide)
“The cause of the high cost of living”—you may think you know it; but you probably don't. You may think it is the war, but it isn't—only in part. Then what is the cause of the high cost of living? Read what follows and you will plainly see it. When you see the cause, it is easy to see the remedy. It is an easy one for you.

The good agricultural lands of the world, and particularly those of civilized countries are being rapidly absorbed; that is, taken up for private ownership. Up to twenty or thirty years ago there were all kinds of government lands in this country, of good quality, open to free entry by the people. In fact, local communities, in those days, expended money, energy and effort to urge the people to come and take up these lands so as to develop their respective localities. Uncle Sam had lands aplenty in those days for homesteads, and pre-emptions, and timber claims. So long as this condition continued, and good lands could be so cheaply secured, it kept the price of farm lands down all over the country. Land was more or less a drug on the market, and prices everywhere were low. Men were “land poor” in those days.

This has all been changed; and now, when an Indian reservation, or other reserve lands are thrown open to the public, there is a wild scramble for them. Public lands, of good quality, with enough rainfall and other favoring conditions for agriculture, are hard to find now, and are negligible in quantity.

With this passing away of the public domain, lands in desirable portions of the United States began to jump in value, and are still climbing. Some of them are now up to the $200 and $250 mark. The free grazing lands of the great prairies of the West are free no more; they have been taken up for farms; and the vast cattle business of the West, producing cheap meats on free grazing ground, is a thing of the past. The same process, in more recent years, has been going on in Canada, and good agricultural lands, everywhere, are constantly increasing in value. There are not enough of them in the world for all the people. Those who grab them, at the right time, are the well-to-do; it makes them such.

The Natural Effect
The effect of high priced lands is high priced foods, clothing and rents. Being called to your attention, you can easily see it. When you realize the facts rightly you can meet the problem. You do not have to be a wise man to be able to see it.

Can you raise cattle and hogs on land that is worth $50 to $250 an acre, and have cheap meats? Can you raise cheap corn on land that is worth $250 an acre; and can you raise and feed on such land, hogs and steers for sale at 2 1-2 to 5 cents a pound on the hoof, the prices that have existed in the past when land was cheap, and in competition with the vast unoccupied prairies of the West? Corn is worth about $1 a bushel or more now; can you raise cheap meats on $1 corn? Can you raise cheap corn on $100 to $200 an acre land? Can you raise cheap wheat or grains, or fruits or vegetables or cheap wool or cotton or timber on high priced lands? You certainly cannot. There is the foundation of the whole trouble of the high cost of living.

The price of land was going up before the European war was ever dreamed of. It is not going to go down when the war is over. With the increase of population, with the demands of the world for reconstruction, with the increased cost of living itself, land values will also increase, rather than diminish. More and more land will be needed for our constantly growing population; and this means greater desirability, and higher and higher price per acre. As population increases and the remaining available lands in Canada, Mexico and our own country are absorbed, the cost of foods, clothing and shelter will increase. With our constantly increasing population, that may in the near future be augmented by millions driven out of Europe by taxation and other harsh conditions that will be created by the war, land values cannot go backwards. And the cheap lands of today will steadily climb to higher and higher values. The lands of the world are being rapidly absorbed. This process was going on before the war, and it may go on still faster after the war is over, with less work for the men in the cities to do and with millions returned from the war to work.

The present abnormal conditions of the European war will pass away, but the high price of lands will still be with us, growing higher and higher. High priced lands can only produce high priced foods, clothing and shelter. And thus the high cost of living will remain with us, the possibly not quite so strenuous as it is today. And it is possible, with European industrial competition after the war, that lower wages may come back to plague us.

Rock and Knock Club
—Is Sure a Bad Bunch

(By FAY KING)
Are you a member of the “Rock and Knock club”? Think well before you answer.

It's a club no one brags about belonging to but it has the largest membership of any woman's club in the world. In fact, it's an international organization. All you need to qualify for life membership is a vivid imagination and an unlimited capacity for talk. The longer winded you are the more welcome you are in the club, because there are two decided factions, those who talk and those who listen.

A rock and knock clubhouse is anywhere a rocking chair fleet is harbored, whether it be on a veranda in a hotel lobby, a hall bedroom or a church social, and the faster they rock the harder they knock.

They are famous for their scandalousness. They get absolutely drunk with delight while running somebody down. They are never known to say a nice thing about anybody, and if they do, be sure it's just the sugar that's coating the bitter pill they'll hand a few minutes later.

You will know them for they are false and fat and screw their faces into scowls and scorns that would frighten birds from a field as no scarecrow has ever done.

They look withered and worn from spiteful thinking, and instinctively all but their own kind edge away, for their minds are like bogs, quagmires and quicksand. Even not to know them is dangerous, but to know them is fatal for you must either be destroyed by them or with them.

To be nice to them is impossible; to pay attention to what they say about you, or how they look at you, or what they seem to be thinking about you, isn't worth while.

Thank goodness, people have advanced to the place where gossip, and malicious ties have no further weight than bragging and blowing has. People no longer believe all they hear. Slander slingers are no longer considered big league pitchers.

Sensible people look upon cat-tongued women as unfortunate, weak-minded degenerates. For to see evil and wrong in everything is most certainly mental degeneracy. Women who thrive upon rotten lies about people are abnormal, and the sooner they make up their minds to quit lying and listening to lies and break away from the rock and knock club, the better it will be for everybody.

When a woman is lashing her tongue beware, for, like the tiger, she is preparing to spring and claw to pieces some fellow creature.

The Test of Good Gasoline

The terrible suffering entailed by the war is well brought out by the British estimate of German casualties, compiled from the German official lists. When it is recalled that these publicly announced estimates are certainly not too high, and that every other country has suffered in proportion, it is not hard to estimate the weight of guilt that is pressing down the souls of the military autocrats who schemed for years to bring the war about.—Eugene Register.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists Sell. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.
