Polo is Ancient.
Polo was played from the backs of horses in Persia during the tenth and eleventh centuries. At that time the Persians in a great contest, Iran versus Turan, found their match in the Turus, greatly to the disgust of King Afrasiab. The Byzantine poet Nizami sang of polo in the twelfth century. Then polo spread from Persia into central Asia, India and Tibet in the sixteenth century, when the great Emperor Akbar patronized it. In Japan the game is at least 1000 years old and is still popular under the name of da-kia.

A KING'S SECRET
By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

"What are you doing, Jean?" asked a soldier of his comrade in barracks in Paris.
"I am commemorating the scene we witnessed today."
He was having tattooed on his right arm in India ink a picture of a guillotine with a figure lying on it.
"What are you doing now?" asked the other again.
"I am beginning to have tattooed under the picture of the guillotine the words 'Death to kings and tyrants.'"
These men had been stationed with their corps about the scaffold on which Louis XVI. had that day been beheaded. He who tattooed his arm was young and an enthusiastic revolutionist. So devoted was he to the cause of the people of France against their king that he did not suppose he would ever be a royalist. As to his being a king, that of course was absurd. He was but a French peasant and a sergeant in the ranks of the army.
But that was an age when the people of France rose to the surface. The kings and nobles passed away, and the commoners took their place. A great commander arose, and with him he pulled up many others. Among them was the soldier who had tattooed his arm. Sergeant Jean Bernadotte under Napoleon became a marshal of France and married a relative of the emperor.

During the early part of the nineteenth century Bonaparte was conquering kingdoms. He did not make republicans of them. He had been a republican and had made up his mind that the government France most needed was a monarchy, with himself at its head. The people he conquered he placed under the control of kings, and these kings were usually members of his own family. Even if Napoleon did not conquer a kingdom his influence was so great that he could control its government.
The throne of Sweden became vacant, and Napoleon nominated—who? The man who had stood guard over his king when he was executed and had tattooed a picture of the deed on his right arm with the words under it, "Death to kings and tyrants."
Here was a king with his own condemnation indelibly stamped on his person. There was no eliminating it. The king was doomed to wear the now hated picture of the death of his sovereign till his own death should destroy it.

The supreme object of the king of Sweden's life was to guard his secret. No valet was called upon to hand him his clothing when he dressed in the morning or to take it from him when he disrobed at night. The office of master of the robes was a sinecure. Had it not been for that which clung like a serpent to his arm he might have at times forgotten that he was a French peasant of whom another commoner monarch had made a king. But the accursed spot would not out. In the morning when he performed his ablutions there it was bared to his gaze. At night when he disrobed it stared at him as with the malicious eyes of a serpent.
In those days when a person was ill the doctors drew blood from him. This was done by lancing the right arm. There is a story that the king of Sweden fell ill, and the doctors suggested that he bare his right arm to be bled. The king refused. The doctors told his majesty that if he did not permit them to bleed him they would not be responsible as to what might happen to him. The king would not yield, but bared his left arm. He was told that it would not be professional to bleed him on his left arm. Nevertheless, since the king would not yield, he was bled from his left arm.
The king recovered, but he was destined to die in his bed. When his last illness came upon him and he believed his end was approaching he sent for Dr. Gorgensen, his principal physician, and charged him in case he died to see that his right arm was exposed to no one except himself. He alone was to possess the secret under a pledge that he would not reveal it. The physician made the pledge, promising that he would personally superintend the laying out of the body. The king did not exact a promise that the doctor would not examine the arm about which so much curiosity had been excited by the king's refusing to be bled from it. Gorgensen might consider it his duty to make the secret public. Having been confided with it and knowing that it did not affect the state, he would likely refrain from divulging it.

When the king was known to be dead Dr. Gorgensen sent every one out of the room and, having locked the doors, lifted the sleeve that covered the dead sovereign's right arm. There was the guillotine, the body strapped to it and the words "Death to kings and tyrants."
Many years had elapsed since that picture was made and those words written. Great had been the rise of the man who had stood looking on as one of the guard attending the execution of the king. But the doctor knew what the world knew—that the dead king had been a French peasant, a soldier in the ranks, and rumor had it that he had been present as one of the guard at the beheading of the king of France. Gorgensen divined the rest.

Strange it is that this peasant king was the only person whom Napoleon created a sovereign whose descendant now sits on a throne.

Confessions of a Slacker

Yes, I am a slacker.
I was always a slacker and very selfish.
I have never been interested in what happened to other people and I have not much soul and no imagination.
I am a hard-headed man.
I am stingy where the welfare of others is concerned but my acquaintances—I have no friends—all say that I have always been very good and generous to myself.
I don't consider that I owe any debt to my country nor to her institutions, nor to her laws, nor to the flag. Accident of birth for which I was not responsible, not the country placed me here.

I understand that the public schools and their great free institutions of learning and just laws may have given me a better start than I would have gotten somewhere else, but that is no reason why I should put myself out to serve, remember, or repay.
I tell you this is a selfish world. To society, to neighbors, to communities in which I have lived, I don't feel that I owe anything, notwithstanding from all of these I have made my fortune; I might have been able to make it somewhere else if I had been born there and wherever there is a doubt I ALWAYS GIVE MYSELF THE BENEFIT OF IT. Suffering and wrongs and slavery, and even the murder of other people, neither interest me nor concern me. I learned a lesson early in my life to not mix up in other people's quarrels.
I saw a drunken man murder his wife and child. I did not interfere because he might have murdered me; besides it was no concern of mine. I saw a boy playmate drowned; I might have saved his life but I also might have lost mine if I had attempted it, so let him drown.

I have never played any favorites, EXCEPT MYSELF. I never give to any cause, however worthy, because, well just between me and you, I don't believe in giving anything away; make people work for it; make them help themselves. If you give to them they don't appreciate it.
Now you take this question of conserving food. I think the poor person has more than he is entitled to now, as far as eating and other comforts are concerned. He has got no right to want or crave the kind of food that I eat, and, besides, I want him, and you, and everybody to understand that I am always entitled to what I want and am always going to get it. I have got money to pay for it and I am going to fill my paunch full of food if women and children go hungry and fall fainting by the wayside, and if soldiers fall on battlefields faint for want of it; I am going to have mine anyhow.

This war is nothing to me; I did not bring it about; I did not wish it. It makes my taxes higher. I don't care whether it makes right or not. I have practiced that all of my life, anyhow, and if the people go back into slavery I will own as many of them as the next fellow, take that from me, and if anybody is going to starve in this country it 'taint going to be me.
If anybody is going to get killed on the battle line 'taint going to be me nor mine.
I tell you I am a provider; got the money to provide with and the basement of my house is full of food now to last three years. Wines, canned goods, barrels of flour and barrels of sugar; hams, bacon, coffee; everything that I am used to, and even if the war lasts five years I have got plenty. That is what I call being a good provider, getting what the other fellow can't and having the money to pay spot cash for it, too.

You know I kind of like this kaiser and his methods and, not wishing to be profane, I can't help going over his motto frequently in my mind: "To hell with the whole world as long as nothing happens to me; and to hell with everybody that don't agree with my sentiments and my practices."
Yes, I am a slacker about everything except myself.

GIRL'S STATEMENT WILL HELP BANDON-BY-THE-SEA
Here is the girl's own story: "For years I had dyspepsia, sour stomach and constipation. I drank hot water and olive oil by the gallon. Nothing helped until I tried buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-I-Kt. ONE SPOONFUL helped me INSTANTLY." Because Adler-I-Kt. flushes the ENTIRE alimentary tract it relieves ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas and prevents appendicitis. It has QUICKEST action of anything we ever sold. C. Y. Lowe, Druggist.

CRITICISM.
It is much easier to be critical than to be correct.—Disraeli.
Critics are sentinels in the grand army of letters, stationed at the corners of newspapers and reviews, to challenge every new author.—Longfellow.
The opinion of the great body of the reading public is very materially influenced even by the unsupported assertions of those who assume a right to criticize.—Macaulay.
Reviewers are forever telling authors they can't understand them. The authors might often reply, is that my fault?—J. C. Hare.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surface. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.
We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, etc.
