One afternoon an esteemed citizen went out to the country club for a turn around the golf links, and after making several rather weird plays he turned to the imperturbable caddy.

"I suppose," said he, "that in caddy-ing around here you have seen worse golf players than I am."

The boy did not answer. With a fixed gaze he seemed to be looking into the distance.

"I said," remarked the golfer in a much louder tone, "that I suppose you have seen worse players than I."

"I heard what ye said the first time, mister," was the startling rejoinder of the caddy, "but ye've got to give a feller time to think."

Interesting Letter From Sam Wood Now in Missouri

DEAR WESTERN WORLD:

We have thought of you many many times during our travels and our only reason for not writing sooner is that we wanted to first get settled in a country where we would be so pleased and happy that we could write back and crow over it, and incidentally, hand Oregon a few packages. But the very fact that we have not yet found that country, and have given up the search, may surprise even your optimistic editor especially when he learns that we spent last summer in southern California, hit a number of southwestern states and are now in the boasted country, Missouri. I believe that Oregon is the best state west of the Missouri river, and that means the best country in the world. This statement must be taken in the broad sense that I give it.

The middle west is the richest country in the sense of labor's product, but the natural resources of Oregon are yet largely unknown, while this section, barring natural resources, held out of use by land grafters, is producing almost to its fullest capacity. As a matter of fact, during these war times every body has work at apparently good wages but the margin between wages and the cost of living is mighty close, in fact the common laborer can hardly support a family. And what seems almost absurd is that the cost of living in this wonderfully productive country is greater than in the west (Oregon or California).

The factors which figure largely in making Oregon the greatest state in the union are its laws and climate. The former is the highest tribute that can be paid to the citizens of your state and is in itself the greatest expression of political concept that has arisen among any people on earth. The latter represents the favorable endowment of Jehovah, and constitutes together with the natural wealth of the country, a part of the stewardship of all Oregonians. Politically, Oregon is a genuine democracy, and her people are the absolute dictators of their own destiny. But remember, that the will that rules throughout the flaming universe holds them responsible for the way in which they wield their political power. The whole will of the great masses of America and her allies is toward fundamental justice, and they are the people who are destined to dictate the world policy of future generations—may Oregon keep the lead!

Yes, Oregon looks better from a distance and by heck we're coming back—not to locate in Bandon but somewhere just east of the coast range. We have Eugene in view. We have purchased an auto and will motor through if our plans work out. We would like to go sometime in the early fall.

Well yes, we first thought of getting a little old Henry, but aside from the fact Fords sell at a very high price here, the Missouri farmers say that the old ones will suck the cows. And as we pass through an extensive dairy country we decided to take no chances so we got a Buick. If Doctors Leep or Mann see this they will swear that I am getting better. However that may be, many times I have sat and wept while hearing the virtues of the Little Henry expounded and I do not yet feel that the tears were shed in vain. But somehow, we feel safer to tackle these hard roads in a heavier car. Incidentally, last evening wife and I saw a head on collision between two Fords. For the life of me I could not understand how they could smash each other up the way they did. One car was thrown clear out of the street across the sidewalk and twisted around a telephone pole. Both cars were completely converted into junk, and the occupants are likely all dead now as they looked as though they were trying to die.
