Skinning a Cat!

There is an old saying, "there are more ways than one of skinning a cat." The man who makes plush capes and muffs from feline pelts, has one way. The school-boy, on his gymnastic pole, has another way. Both are right from their standpoint. We do not wish to skin a cat either way—in fact don't want to skin one at all, but only to say that when the long catalog of catastrophes and calamities overtake you; which they will, sooner or later, I have the Balm of Gilead and can supply all your needs in the way of remedial agencies.

Yours for 50c wheat,

HE IS KNOWN HERE.

Dr. Bill Arrested at Eugene for Larceny in Portland.

The Oregonian says, J. J. Bill, a veterinary surgeon and dentist, 35 years of age, hailing from Boise City, Idaho, who was arrested in Eugene Wednesday of last week, by Chief of Police Day, was brought to Portland by Detective Griffin, and booked at the central station on a charge of larceny. While living in Portland, Bill made his home in the boarding house kept by Mrs. Emma S. Marvin, 564 Sixth street, and seemed to be an awful nice fellow. He lost no time in seeking to ingratiate himself in the good favor of his landlady, and was so successful that when he disappeared last Thursday there was also missing a gold watch and chain valued at $160, a pair of field glasses worth $20, a $10 silk umbrella, a valise and sundry other articles worth $20 more. He pawned the watch before he left, and for a week Chief Minto has been on the lookout for the miscreant.

Circular letters giving a full description of the thief and stolen property were sent throughout the state and Washington by Chief Minto, and through such agency Bill was captured by Chief Day at Eugene. When brought back by Detective Griffin, the prisoner made no denial of the crime, and was arraigned in the municipal court.

Bill is well known in Athens. He came here a couple of years ago accompanied by his wife and child, a little girl of almost 4 years of age. He took an office in the Commercial Livery Stable, then conducted by Geo. Froome, and did some business in the veterinary line. He sported a horse and carriage, and frequently drove out with his wife.

They had rooms at the Athena Restaurant, and failed to pay their board bill on leaving town, their trunk, clothing, etc., were held for payment by the proprietors of the restaurant. Bill was absent from town at the time, having gone to Walla Walla to ingratiate himself into the good graces of the people over there, his wife being left here to bear the brunt of all the troubles. Since going to Walla Walla, we understand he deserted his wife and child, and the woman procured a divorce.

Sunday last was Master Dick Winship's sixth birthday and a number of his little friends dropped in to have a jolly good time, and they had it, only as children can. Big cakes and rosy apples were there in profusion. Souvenirs in the form of peanuts with four legs made of pins, a raisin for the head and a smaller peanut for the tail, were distributed and formed whatever sort of an animal the children's imaginative faculties might arrive at. Those present were:

He Catches Coyotes.

R. E. Stewart has a novel method of capturing coyotes. In his neighborhood the varmints are exceedingly destructive to poultry. Mr. Stewart has tried poison and other remedies which are duly prescribed for the destruction of the festive prowler of the sage-brush, but without any noticeable effect. He has at last hit upon a novel plan for the sure capture of Mr. Coyote and the beauty of it is its sure kill, and no fail. The trap, if such it may be called, consists of two posts, an army musket, and a string, at the end of which is a dead chicken. The musket is tied to the posts, and the string is fastened to the trigger of the musket, and when the coyote undertakes to masticate or make away with the chicken, boom goes the gun—result, a dead coyote.

As a general thing, it is all right, as winter with its chilling winds and icy blasts approaching, for shade trees to divest themselves of their worn and faded apparel, and arrayed only in their sombre robes of forgetfulness, sleep through the dreary months, to be awakened by gentle spring to the necessity of again donning their gay attire. As before stated this is, as a rule, entirely proper, but; there exceptions to all rules, consequently to this. For instance, that locust tree in front of the bank, should wear clothing all the time. A pair of bloomers would be very appropriate.

John Foss, Tom Purdy and Chas. Fischer left Monday on a wild-geese chase. Their destination was the mouth of the Yakima. They were well supplied with goose bait and other accessories necessary to camp life on the raging Yakima. Reports say that wild-geese in that vicinity are as numerous as grasshoppers. It is a foregone conclusion that they will kill time and catch a bad cold, if nothing else. Counterhopper Fisher will do the gun work, while the other boys, Deacon John and Tamarac Tom will act as decoys. If their venture proves successful they will ship in a few car loads of wild-geese over the W. & C. R.

A few days ago the celebrated bay filly, "Oregon Wonder," the peerless trotter that Jim Hays drives to his delivery wagon, was standing quietly in front of Kirkland's store, apparently enjoying a refreshing nap. However, a close observer might have detected the fact that the filly was snoozing with one eye open, evidently on the lookout for the red flag, which she recognizes as a signal for a trial of speed. Her peaceful repose, or cat-nap if you please, on this occasion was of short duration, and was rudely disturbed by an unforeseen incident. Kirkland's cat was in an unusually playful mood, scampering and cavorting about on the side walk. Suddenly it made a dash and ran up one of the "Oregon Wonder's" hind legs, presumably mistaking it for a tree or telephone pole. Possibly it may have seen a mouse, though the idea is hardly tenable, as Jim manipulates a curry comb too often to allow for the possibility of mice building nests on a horse of his; still, whatever its object, it don't change the fact that the cat actually climbed the rear limb of the bay filly, the peerless trotter. This seeming familiarity on the part of the feline greatly disturbed the equinimity of the equine, in other words the "Oregon Wonder," probably wondering what was the matter, became quite animated and danced an exaggerated fandango to a finish, and would have ran away only for the timely arrival of her driver. During the melee the wagon ran over the cat, though without any satisfactory result, as it escaped uninjured. Thus, what threatened to be a serious catastrophe, happily terminated in a slight category. This is the only instance on record where a horse deliberately attempted to "SKIN-A-CAT."

BOY BURNED TO DEATH.

Frightful Accident to James Frazier's Three-Year-Old Son.

The three-year-old son of James Frazier, of Milton, met with a frightful accident on Saturday, which resulted in his death on the day following. The little fellow seems, had slipped out of bed about 6 o'clock in the morning, when his father was going to work, and entered the parlor where a fire was blazing brightly in the fireplace. He crawled up to warm himself, and was sitting on the floor when a spark flew out and ignited his nightdress. The little one was soon enveloped in a mass of gnawing flames, and its pitious cries at once brought the parents to his side, but the deadly flames had accomplished their fatal work ere the frantic parents could extinguish them. The little fellow lived until Sunday afternoon, when death relieved him of his terrible suffering. The funeral took place at Milton Monday afternoon. The funeral sermon was preached by Rev. Taggart of Pendleton.

FOUND HIS WIFE DEAD.

A Sad Shock to Henry Koepke a Resident of Helix.

Tuesday, Henry Koepke, of Helix, was in town transacting business. He left for his home about 4 o'clock, and the fates had decreed that he should experience a terrible shock on his arrival there. On the kitchen floor, with her chin resting on the stove hearth, was his life-long help-mate, cold in death.

It appears the estimable lady was engaged in preparing the evening meal, when she was attacked with heart failure, and sank unconscious never to rise again. The hired man came to the house but a few minutes before Mr. Koepke arrived, for his supper. Not seeing any light and the quiet of the surroundings indicated to him that the lady of the house was probably visiting some of the neighbors, he went to strike a light to prepare his own supper, and in doing so, stumbled over the dead body of Mrs. Koepke.

It was a terrible shock to the household and father who is well known all over the country, and has legions of friends who feel deeply for him in his hour of affliction. Mrs. Koepke was a most kind and estimable woman and has resided in Helix for a period of 17 years. She leaves a husband and three children, two sons and a daughter, to mourn her loss as a faithful wife and a loving mother.
