Our camp we called Camp Bryan, And the name we posted well, Everyone of us for silver And could give a silver yell.

You know why we called it Bryan, For our nominee so bold; It he fails to reach the White House, He'll be beaten with the gold.

One night we held a meeting Around the campfire bright, To ratify for Bryan, Which we did with all our might.

Van Winkle was our chairman, (No relation to old Rip,). And the speech he made for silver Caused the gold-bug heads to dip.

Fred took notes for the ATHENA PRESS Mrs. Goodman for the Leader, And the jolly time we had there Will be enjoyed by every reader.

We sang our songs for silver, So the forest did resound; Ali our votes we pledged for Bryan, When November rolls around

Hurrah for Billy Bryan, And for silver bright and free; We pledge ourselves for Bryan, Beneath the huckleberry tree.
—By ONE NOT PRESENT.

Clark Wood, editor of the Leader, was visitor at the camp, the guest of Editor Boyd, Saturday night and went to Saling's camp to spend Sunday. He returned to Weston with the crowd Wednesday. We congratulate him as a berry picker, for with the help of the Bryan ites and numerous other good mountain eers he succeeded in getting a gallon of nackleberries.

The five composing the Athena branch of Camp Bryan report forty gallons of the luscious fruit and they left plenty for others who may desire to stop there. The family of Mr Robbins, the well known thresher, are camped and we found pleas ant company in Mrs. Robbins and little

M. M. Johns and family sent word they would stop on Friday en route to Saling's and dine with us. We were ignorant of the fact that they would bring us any dainties, so we left early for the berry patch. When they arrived there was no one "to home," but the campfire was smoldering, and they cooked their dinner, helping themselves to what our cupboard afforded. On our return we noted some one had been there, and we found a pan with some fresh beef with a note, "This beef has been safted, Aug.
14, '96. Where do you keep your sugar?"
Prof. VanWinkle and Allan are good at imitating a "bar" and gave our party quite a scare. We found such pleasant company in the family of Mr. Goodman, and the death of Mrs. Stewart, Mrs. Goodman's mother, cast quite a gloom on our merry crowd. We sympathize with them all in this bereavement There was a good deal of rivalry in our camp as to who would be the champion punster, and we herewith report a few of the "Wood" be bright sayings:

A family named Shumway was camped not far away, and punster No. 1 said, F(h)um-way I can't catch onto that name." A suggestion was made that dynamits be used to clear the stumps for the farm land, when the bright editor of the Weston Leader remarked, "I will have to dine a mite to stay my stomach if you don't keep still,"

One Wednesday, the sole occupants of our camp were Grandma Van Winkle, Oscile and Mrs. Boyd and Grace Bradley. Mrs. Boyd heard a congar's cry and their slumbers were disturbed, and at day-break noises were heard near the tent. Mrs. Boyd armed herself with a 38 rifle, steathily approaching the door of the tent prepared to meet a cougar or any other "bird" of its kind when to her horror and disgust, she found the racket was made by our chickens coming off the roost. and before the department could reach the place the barn was a sheet of flame and the large elevator was smoking from the intense heat. The hose lacked considerable of reaching, and that the elevator is standing today, is due to the untiring efforts of the Hook and Ladder Company. It is supposed that the fire was of incendiary origin, as only last week, a stable close to the elevator was discovered to be on fire, but aby dint of and before the department could reach covered to be on tire, but by dint of good fortune and prompt action was put out before damage to any extent was done. Mr. Clemens lost three good horses, which fell a prey to the fire fiend, also a large quantity of hay, harness etc. It is understood that some insurance was carried on the stable.

Gray Hair Made Dark. I saw in your paper a statement that Zula Vulier would restore any head of hair to natural color in three weeks. Marshfield, Or., Aug. 15.—H. Bultman, of the Umpqua life-saving station, came to town early this morning and brought the sad intelligence of the drowning of M. A. Stream, keeper of the Umpqua lighthouse, yesterday afternoon. He is an excellent swimmer, and went out through the breakers. After diving through the first breaker, he was heard to cry for help. It was on the open sea beach, and it was impossible to render any assistance before he was carried off shore by the undertow. He was accustomed to going in awimming in the surf, and the theory advanced is that he was taken with cramps. He had been in the service for thirteen years, and was 46 years of age. He was a brother of Cap-tain Al Stream. He was a member of the Maccabees, and also carried life insurance amounting to about $8000. He leaves

A Fashionably Dressed Young Lady Non-

But one of the dozen chairs in a popalar Cincinnati barber shop was vacant about ten o'clock the other morning, when a fashionably dressed young woman entered, removed her wrap, veil and hat, handed them to the openmouthed boy, walked to the vacant chair, sat down in it, threw her head back on the padded rest, and placed her daintly shod feet on the foot

"Bangs trimmed?" asked the bar-

The barber, says the Tribune, keeping his eyes on her all the time, tucked a towel under her chin, lathered the places she had indicated, stropped the razor and went to work. A few strokes and it was over, and when her face had been washed and powdered, she left the chair, allowed the boy to put on her wrap, adjusted her hat and veil with much deliberation, and, throwing a half dollar on the cashier's counter, valked out. The effect of this visit on the other barbers and their victims was to cause the barbers to forget, for the first time in their lives, to tell the victims that they needed shampoos, and the victims to fail to notice the cuts in their faces when the lady said "shave." The barber who shaved the pretty lady, when he recovered, said there was a fine growth of hair on her face, just enough when it got long to give the skin a slighfly dark hue.

"She'd been there before," he added. A HOST IN HIMSELF.

He Was an E Pluribus Unum Sort of a It would be well if all jokes were as innocent as one played by a railroad conductor upon a commercial traveler, and related by the traveler himself in the Yankee Blade. He had left the train at a little station, a junction, on a western branch road, where he was to wait several hours for a train going in another direction. There was no one in sight, and he was looking about in a homesick fashion, when the conductor spoke to him.

"Dull place, ain't it?" said the con-

"Rather," answered the commercial traveler, "especially if you've got to stay here four hours." "Oh, well, you won't be without com-

"But I don't see any.

"Well," said the conductor, speaking lowly, as if he were reckoning them up by a process of recollection, "there's the telegraph operator, the booking clerk, the cloak-room clerk, the signalman, the storekeeper, the accident insurance agent, the postmaster, and one or two other officials. You'll find 'em inside the station."

"That isn't so bad," the traveler thought, and as the train started he entered the door. The station was dimly lighted, with no one in sight but a sandy-haired man at the telegraph instrument.

"Where are the others?" asked the traveler.

"What others?" answered the telegraph operator. Why, the cloak-room man, the booking clerk, the postmaster and the rest."

The man began to grin.
"Oh, it is that conductor again," he "Well, where are they?" repeated the traveler, with some asperity.

The sandy-ha red man tapped himself on the ches "Them's me," he said. "Come in and sit with us." And the traveler, appreciating the joke—a sort of e piuribus unum re-versed,—accepted the invitation, and found himself in pretty good company.

"In that country once known as the Great American 'Desert,' embracing a portion of Texas and Arizona, there are no odors," said a citizen of Dallas to a Cincinnati Enquirer reporter. "There luscious grapes and many other fruits grow, especially near the cross timber country, but there is no perfume; wild flowers have no smell, and carcasses of dead animals, which in dry seasons are very plentiful, emit no odor. It was always supposed to be a treeless plain, upon which no plant could grow or breathing thing could live, but a large part of it is now successfully cultivated, and but for the rarity of the atmos phere, causing the peculiarity I have named, and the mirages, which are even more perfect than in the Desert of Sahara, no one would look upon it as a barren country now. Another singular feature common to the desert land is that objects at a great distance appear greatly magnified. A few scraggy esquite bushes will look like a noble forest; stakes driven into the ground will seem like telegraph poles.' BERLIN has just decided that wooden pavements are a failure, while Constantinople is having the first one put down. Time first London directory was printed in 1667 and contained but sixty-
