ATHENA, JUNE 10, 1898.

A number of our exchanges have lately been urging their people to cease sending away from home for their goods and to patronize their home merchants. A little advice of this kind would not be amiss for our people. We hear so many saying they cannot get what they want of the home merchant. This is to some extent true, but it is also true that the people who send their money to Chicago and other places for goods are in a great measure to blame for their not having a complete stock of goods. Trade with your home dealer and let them know that you depend on them for your goods and they will be supplied for you. The rule should be never to send to other towns for goods that you can get of your home merchants. You may think you save money by buying in Chicago, but all things considered you are mistaken. It always pays to help build up your own town. If you don't believe it, just try it for one year.

The lessons of the war are coming thick and fast, and they cannot fail to have a beneficial and lasting effect. One of the most important lessons already learned is that we should have long since annexed the Hawaiian islands and begun the construction of the Nicaragua canal. Already opinion on these subjects is undergoing a change, and it cannot be long before all true Americans will reach a realization of the fact that the time has passed when the narrow doctrines of the past can be adhered to. Indeed we have reached a period in national affairs when we can no longer sit in independent isolation as a nation and take no part in the political affairs of the world.

France and Italy have suspended duties on wheat until July 1st. The French duty is equivalent to 30 cents a bushel. The Italian is rather less. Both are practically prohibitive, and their suspension opens up two rich markets that have been in effect closed hitherto. Added to this is another piece of good news, that Russia—our greatest European rival in feeding mankind—ends her grain supply so short that a decree has been issued forbidding grain exports. Thus we have new markets and a withdrawal of competition at a time when our farmers still hold a great proportion of their last year's grain. All this means a better price for our wheat on hand, which will be shipped away, making room for the big crop we have growing.

There is a strong sentiment in congress against granting any further appropriation for an American exhibit at the Paris exposition in 1900. The unfriendliness of the French people toward us in our conflict with Spain and the ill treatment received by Americans in Paris will probably lead to a national boycott of the Paris exposition, and the refusal of our people to buy French goods. Americans have been very lavish of their money in France, and the withdrawal of our tourists and our trade will lead the French to realize that their unfriendliness to us is going to cost them dear, while we shall learn that we can do best by ourselves by spending our time and money at home.

When the war with Spain began the price of sulphur was $22 a ton, but as the result of Spain's action in declaring this article contraband of war the price has risen to $35 a ton, and predictions are freely made that it will be $100 before many more months have passed. Here is an opportunity to develop another of the wonderful resources of the United States. There are sulphur mines in this country; yet we have always depended upon Sicily for practically our entire supply. The American product should now be given a great chance. "There's millions in it."

The Oregon's journey of 13,000 miles, which began with its departure from San Francisco on March 22, and which equals a distance of more than half way round the globe, is one of the most remarkable voyages which a war ship has ever made. A far greater distance was traversed than any naval vessel of anything like the Oregon's weight ever covered in that time. So far as known not the slightest disarrangement to the boat's machinery occurred on the way. The Oregon's trip furnishes a fine illustration of the capabilities and seaworthiness of American warships.

McKinley is now pursuing a course, which had he followed in the beginning, the trouble with Spain would have been ended. Every bit of war news is examined by government censors before it is given to the press. The manner in which all news since the destruction of the Maine has been given the press by the government and its agents served the purposes of Spain to the greatest advantage. Every movement of the United States army was known in advance, and Spain could direct her navy accordingly.

The present generation has never witnessed such an outpouring of the sentiment of patriotism as the war with Spain has evoked. Never before have the national colors been so profusely, so universally displayed in city, town and village. Never before has the younger generation of men been so profoundly stirred by allusions to the country's cause.

One exchange well remarks, "who would have thought a little while ago that in this year of our Lord the French people would be jostling Americans from the sidewalks of Paris, and the secretary of state for the colonies of Great Britain would be recommending an alliance between the Stars and Stripes and the Cross of St. George."

The doctors seem to be united on the point that cigarette smoking is responsible for most of the rejections of militiamen who have come up recently for examination as applicants to enter the regular army. They ought to have included the cocktail habit and lack of exercise. The three combined would wreck a Sandow in six months.

If Spanish honor means anything, the leader of the Spanish fleet now in the West Indies, would never see Spain again. Before he left that country Admiral Cervera took an oath that he would never return to Spain unless he was victorious.
