

ANIMALS UNCAUGHT.

Some Kinds of Beasts That Have Never Been Caged.

Zoos Intensely Eager to Secure Specimens of Certain Newly-Discovered Creatures of Foreign Climes.

"Oh, there are a good many animals that are still to be caught and exhibited in the menageries," said the old animal man, according to the Cincinnati Enquirer, reaching into the cage and scratching the head of a jaguar. "I can run off quite a list without stopping to think. All the zoos are crazy now for an okapi. That's the strange prehistoric beast that Sir Harry Johnston found alive in Eastern Africa. It's a cross between a giraffe and a horse, apparently, and a mighty big animal. There'll be big money for the circus that gets the first example, and there are some plucky and smart men in Uganda at this very moment looking for the brute. 'Nobody has been lucky enough or smart enough to catch a Kadiak bear alive and carry him to civilization. There's something like a beast for you—big as a calf, so that he'd make a roaring Rocky mountain grizzly look like a little brown bear alongside of him. 'Down in South America, somewhere back in the northeastern side of the Andes, a little north of the equator, is a beast that is the biggest rodent in the world. Travelers have seen pieces of its hide and its bones, and a few have glimpsed it as it sped through the dark primeval forests. It is a true rodent like the rat, but it is as big as a Newfoundland dog. That would be a good catch for a zoological garden. 'Another fine prize is down there in South America. It is a new species of jaguar, quite different from any that has ever been exhibited in the shows in any part of the world. It's a big black fellow, and tremendously fierce. Nobody has ever taken one alive. 'Then in the forests of the Amazon are two birds that would make their captor a famous man among zoologists. They are the bell bird, which has a voice exactly like a clear, ringing bell, and the 'Lost Soul,' which has a cry that makes the shivers creep along a man's backbone when he hears it in those dark, mysterious, silent, forbidding woods. 'In Burmah somewhere is a rhinoceros that has a black hide and big tufted ears. The hide has been seen by white men lots of times, but they haven't ever seen a living animal. 'Up in the Himalayas a man has been looking for years for—what do you suppose? A unicorn. He may be crazy—he may be right. He says that he has heard so many tales from the native hunters up there of the existence of a one-horned antelope-horse that he is bound to try and get one. I don't think there is any such thing myself, but then I didn't take much stock in the discovery of a primitive wild horse in Central Asia, either, and now the zoological gardens of Hamburg and New York both have living specimens of these horse-funny, big-headed little brutes that are representatives of some type of horse that must be hundreds of thousands of years old. 'Down in New Zealand, comparatively small as the land is, there are many animal and bird mysteries still. They say that there is a brand new—that is, new to the world—type of animal on the order of the duck bill down there yet. Darwin always thought that some day a veritable lizard-bird (not a flying lizard, but a true missing link between the birds and the reptiles) might be found there. 'One explorer followed mysterious footprints in the snow of the high mountains of New Zealand, but never came up with the beast that had made it. But they were such strange footprints that other scientists agreed with him that the thing that made them was quite unknown to the world, and must be a wonderful thing. 'So, you see, there is plenty of work still for us wild animal catchers. We haven't seen everything that there is to be seen, by a long shot."

Early Gold Specimens.
The voyage of the Argonauts, the date of which is uncertain, was professedly a rush for gold, to be collected in fleeces placed in the torrents flowing down the flanks of Mt. Caucasus. But older much was the westward movement, which Chaldean records of 3800 B. C. chronicle, to the gold-bearing land of Meluhha, afterward known as Midian. Latex on, but still at a very early period, there was a rush from Egypt to a spot inland from the present Suakim. Long afterward this was described by Diodorus Siculus, who left a map, still extant, showing the wells provided for the gold seekers between the Red sea and the mines. About 1000 B. C. there seems to have been another rush of miners in search of gold into South Africa. Its numbers can only be guessed at from the extensive remains that still exist.—Stray Stories.

Attempted Jail Break.
James Haley, sentenced to the penitentiary for grand larceny, and Harvey Clark, who shot a Northern Pacific conductor at Oakesdale last week, attempted to break jail at Colfax Saturday night. They made a saw out of a knife, loosened a bar on top of the cage and were about to saw through the floor into the prosecuting attorney's office when they were found on top of the cage by Deputy Sheriff Nesley as he went to lock up the prisoners for the night.

OBITUARY.

Thomas Ogle was born in Buchanan county, Missouri, May 4, 1845, and died August 21, 1904, at 6:45 a. m. at the home of his brother, B. F. Ogle. The funeral services were conducted by the Odd Fellow lodge of which he had been a member for 19 years. Mr. Ogle served 11 months as a private soldier in the civil war in company D, 48th regiment of the Missouri volunteers, enlisting at the age of 19. He was taken prisoner by Price at Glasgow, Missouri, receiving an injury at Benton Barracks which disabled him for life. Mr. Ogle, with his brother Joseph, came to Denver in 1865, and crossed the plains from Missouri in 1867. His father and family came across in 1865, settling at Eugene, Lane county, where Thomas lived till 1878. From there he came to Ridge, Umatilla county, Ore., where he lived until his brother, B. F. Ogle and family, moved to Athena. He came to Athena January 22, 1904, where he remained until death claimed him. He lived as a part of the B. F. Ogle family for 26 years, and was as near as a father or child. He was with a surveying company that surveyed in Eastern Oregon and the boundary lines of California. He and his brothers, Joseph and B. F. Ogle, were in the Willow Springs Indian fight, where 45 men fought against 1000 Indians July 6, 1878. He had a narrow escape from losing his life. His father died nearly 20 years ago. His mother died when he was small, and his oldest sister, Mrs. Malinda Pennington, died October 6th, 1903, at her home in Lebanon, Kansas. His oldest brother died in 1880 and his youngest brother died in 1877, at the home of B. F. Ogle at Ridge, Ore. Mr. Ogle was unmarried and leaves a brother, sister, two half brothers and one half sister, as follows: B. F. Ogle, of Athena, Or.; Mrs. Lucy Ogle, Huen, Wash.; J. H. Ogle, Canyon City, Ore.; J. M. Ogle, Vinson, Ore., and Mrs. M. M. Riggs, Lane county, Ore., besides a host of nieces and nephews to mourn the loss of a loving relative. Mr. Ogle was one of Oregon's early pioneers and was among the first to settle in Eastern Oregon. He was one of Umatilla county's leading farmers, owning 400 acres of fine farming land north of Pendleton. Athena now mourns the loss of one of its most respected citizens. Everyone from far and near seemed to be his friend. He was very peaceable and had a good word for everyone who chanced to meet him. He died with a complication of heart trouble and Bright's disease from which he has suffered for several months. When he was taken to the bed he only lasted three weeks. He had been under the doctor's care for nearly a year. Copied.
