EASTMAN JOHNSON.

He Was Once Invited to Be Court Painter at The Hague.

Holland, the country above all others to which art owes gratitude for the creation and maintenance of sane traditions of painting, rendered a signal service to American art in the middle of the last century in the solid technical training which it gave to Eastman Johnson.

The education of our earlier painters had been various. When the nineteenth century was nearing its middle period there was a general exodus of students to Dusseldorf, and it was to pursue his studies there that in 1849 Eastman Johnson took ship for Europe.

The vessel on which Johnson sailed, bound for Antwerp, was detained at Flushing, and it is to be regretted that no written record has been made of the story which Johnson delighted to tell, and told so well, of how he and his comrade, George Henry Hall, who survives him—impatient young pilgrims desiring to plunge at once into the promised land of art—left the vessel and, ignorant of the language and customs of the country, trudged on foot along the river, Scheidt toward their goal.

On their way each step revealed to their new world eyes some detail filled with romance and promise, until after nightfall they found themselves before the closed gates of the city of Antwerp, which was then a walled town obedient to the old custom of curfew.

After an amusing parley in conflicting tongues the capital of Flemish art received them kindly, and henceforward the art of Flanders and Holland made so direct and sympathetic an appeal to Johnson that his sojourn in Dusseldorf was comparatively brief, and its lessons had little or no visible effect on his life work.

His earlier student stage passed, he settled at The Hague, where his success was so marked that when after an absence of long duration he determined to return to the United States his patriotic purpose was carried out in the face of a temptation to accept the formal proffer of the position of court painter at The Hague.—Scribner's.

The Will For The Deed.

After Miss Lavinia Cobb, who had called in her nephew, Frederic Cobb, attorney at law, to draw her will, had made bequests to beloved relatives and friends and to unknown individuals whom she admired, and had remembered her pet charities, she began on religious institutions.

"Now, there's the First Baptist," she said enthusiastically. "I don't want to leave anything to the church proper, because it is the richest in town. But I want you to put down $150 for Mr. Bicknell as a slight recognition of his casual service to my soul. And—"

"But, aunt," began the lawyer nephew, who had long been striving to speak. "What's wrong now, Freddy?" demanded Miss Lavinia. "Isn't 'casual service' all right? It is precisely what I mean. I am a member of Mr. Marvin's church—and I shall remember him handsomely later—but Mr. Bicknell's sermons have done me much good, and I have heard him—well, perhaps ten times in all, so I think 'casual service' just expresses it. But if you think it doesn't or that it would make trouble put down the legal equivalent."

"It's not the phraseology, aunt, but your estate. You haven't sufficient property to make so many and such large gifts."

"Oh, I know that as well as you do," Miss Lavinia said, with gentle impatience. "I just want to show all my friends how I feel toward them. You needn't look so—so—judicial, Freddy. It's my will, not yours."—Youth's Companion.

A Problem at Cambridge.

When Lord Rayleigh, the British scientist, was a student at Cambridge the examiners set among other problems one which they based on an article in a German mathematical periodical supposed unlikely to have penetrated to Cambridge. Only two men solved it, Mr. Sturt (Lord Rayleigh) and another. The examiners asked the other man about this problem. "Oh," he said, "I take the—(mentioning the name of the periodical), and I was very glad to find that, thanks to an article in the last number, that problem came out quite easily." When Mr. Sturt's turn came they expected a similar answer, but he astonished them by replying: "The fact is, gentle men, that I sometimes contribute to—, and I could not help feeling greatly flattered that you should have thought my little problem worthy of a place in this examination." He was awarded the prize.

INDUSTRIAL ITEMS.

A plant for manufacturing artificial marble was recently established in Catania, Italy.

The discovery in Ceylon of thorium, the rare earth used in the manufacture of incandescent gas mantles, will deprive Germany of the monopoly of its supply.

American exports of cotton, raw and manufactured, were last year $431,000,000. Iron and steel came next with $134,000,000, then hog products with $105,000,000.

Industrial wages paid in the United States for 1905 were 1.6 per cent higher than for the preceding year, according to official figures. The cost of food increased by 0.8 per cent, which left the workingman 1 per cent additional revenue.

Had a Close Call

"A dangerous surgical operation, involving the removing of a malignant ulcer as large as my hand from my daughter's hip, was prevented by the application of Bucklan's Arnica Salve," says A. C. Stickel, of Milwaukie, W. Va. "Persistent use of the salve completely cured it." Cures cuts, burns and injuries. 25c at McBride's.

Made Happy for Life

Great happiness came into the home of S. C. Blair, school superintendent at St. Albans, W. Va., when his little daughter was restored from the dreadful complaint he names. He says: "My little daughter had St. Vitus' Dance, which yielded to no treatment but grew steadily worse until as a last resort we tried Electric Bitters; and I rejoice to say three bottles effected a complete cure." Quick, sure cure for nervous complaints, general debility, female weakness, impoverished blood and malaria. Guaranteed by Wm. McBride, Palace drug store. Price, 50c

No Such Thing as Luck

We sometimes say men who have acquired fortunes are lucky. If you should inquire closely into the facts, you would in all probability find that it was not mere chance that brought their wealth, but their advancement came about because they put themselves in a position to make money and kept persistently at it, and with few exceptions our wealthiest men began with small savings.

This bank will help you to get a start. We will allow you 4 per cent on your savings account compounded semi-annually and give it our prompt and careful attention. Meanwhile your earnings are where they are unquestionably safe.
