SLAVES IN MASSACHUSETTS.
House in Which They Were Sold
Hells of Town of Hanover.
A relic of slavery days in New England in the middle of the eighteenth century, the old Tilden house on Winter street, West Hanover, the only house in that town where slaves were kept for market, is now being demolished, says the Boston Herald.
The house is one of the best-known landmarks in Plymouth County and has stood for nearly 200 years. It was used as a tavern in its early days and later for a residence. Of recent years it has been abandoned to the elements and has rapidly fallen into decay.
No one knows the exact date of the building of the house, but historians agree that it was long before the incorporation of the town of Hanover in 1727.
Jedediah Dweilley, of North Hanover, who has spent much time in gathering facts concerning the early history of the town, says: "While there was more or less buying and selling of slaves (as in the middle of the eighteenth century nearly all the wealthy families owned one or more) this probably was the only place where the traffic was carried on for revenue. I have seen two bills of slaves sold from this house. One was from Job Tilden to a Mr. Bailey, of Seltunate, a negro child named Morrow, 9 years of age, of good bodily health and a kind disposition."
One of Mr. Tilden's slaves named Cuffee served as a soldier in the Revolutionary War, and according to an old pay roll he was stationed at Hull, March 1, 1777. He was with Col. Bailey and died at Valley Forge. He was known as Cuffee Tilden and was so inscribed on the printed rolls.
The books of the First Congregational Church of Hanover record the marriage by the Rev. Benjamin Bass on Feb. 8, 1751, of Jack and Billah, servants owned by Job Tilden, and also the death of a negro boy owned by Job Tilden, Feb. 12, 1750.
There are many other brief records of slaves kept in different families in Hanover.

GOOD Short Stories
At a recent sale of old books and curios the auctioneer said, "This book, gentlemen, is especially valuable, as it contains a marginal note in the handwriting of John Dryden. Five pounds offered. Going—going—gone. It is yours, sir." The autograph marginal note by the renowned scholar was as follows: "This book is not worth the paper it is printed on."
Recently a very suspicious countryman went to New York to see the sights. Coming to the Metropolitan Museum, he was amazed to find that the admission to this splendid building cost nothing. He mused the steps and entered. "Your umbrella, sir," said a uniformed official, extending his hand. The countryman jerked back his umbrella, laughed scornfully, and turned on his heel. "I knowed there was some cheat about it when ye got in free," he said.
A teacher in one of the public schools of Baltimore was one day instructing her pupils in the mysteries of etymology, when she had occasion to question a boy pupil with reference to the word "recuperate." "As an example," said the teacher, "we will take the case of your father. He is, of course, a hard-working man." "Yes'm," assented Charley. "And when night comes, he returns home tired and worn out, doesn't he?" "Yes'm," in further assent from Charley. "Then," continued the teacher, "it being night, his work is over, and he being tired and worn out, what does he do?" "That's what ma wants to know," said Charley.
Patrick, recently arrived and unused to the ways of this country, was accosted one day by a member of the sporting fraternity, who offered to impart to him, for a modest consideration, a marvelous way to make money without toiling for it. All one needed, he said, was a small amount to bet on a certain horse that couldn't possibly lose. "And yez say Oi can get that money without working for it?" asked the bewildered Irishman, when the other was through explaining. "Sure thing. All the work you got to do is to count the mazuma." "I'll thry it," said Pat. So they hied them to a race-course, where the sporty-looking gentleman placed Pat's money at odds of five to one. And the horse won! Pat's joy was unbounded when he was handed a large roll of yellow-backed bills. Calling his new-found friend to one side, he asked in a voice that trembled with excitement: "Oi say, how long has this been goin' on?"

Sagacity of Ravens.
A case of remarkable sagacity in a pair of ravens is related in the Field. Two collie dogs were hunting rabbits and the ravens were soaring overhead. As the dogs drove the rabbit out into the open near the top of a hill it ran straight into a trap and was caught. As the dogs came near the ravens came down and by loud croaking managed to drive away both. They then started to devour the rabbit, which they quickly dispatched.
"Bumper."
The word "bumper," meaning a drinking vessel, derived its origin from the Roman Catholic religion.
It was the custom in England in ancient times to drink the health of the Pope after dinner in a full glass of wine. This was called "au bon pere," from which we have the contraction "bumper."
"I hear," said Hi Tragedy, "that while you were playing in one of the country towns a fire broke out in the theater."
"Yes," replied Low Comedy, "and there might have been a horrible panic but for one thing."
"What was that?"
"There weren't enough people in the house to create one."
Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.
Poor Thing.
"I don't suppose Miss Passay ever had any beaux when she was a young girl."
"No, she was too dignified and old-fashioned."
"And the men don't like her now, either."
"No, she's too kittenish now."—Philadelphia Ledger.
Wily Woman.
"Women are such convenient liars," declared Mr. Jefferson Judd. "When the Wigginses were here to dinner you kept saying Mrs. Wiggins didn't eat enough to keep a bird alive. You know that wasn't so."
"Well," retorted Mrs. Judd. "There's different kinds of birds. You may have had a canary in your mind while I was referring to an ostrich."—Kansas City Times.

His Easy Job.
"Isn't this a wearisome sort of occupation?" asked the customer. "You have to remember so much, and answer so many questions."
"Not at all, madam," answered the book store salesman. "All I have to remember is the titles, names of authors, and prices."
"You sell a great many of the popular novels, don't you?"
"Yes, ma'am, but I don't have to read them."
No Right to Complain.
"See here!" cried the irate man. "I purpose to sue you. Look at my head! You professed to cure—"
"Wait a minute," interrupted the maker of Fakeley's Balsam; "we advertise merely that we cure partial baldness and not—"
"Well, I was only partially bald when I started using your stuff; now I haven't a hair!"
"Well, then you're cured of your partial baldness, aren't you?"

"Dunce."
It is a strange fact that the word "dunce," meaning a stupid person, comes from the name of one of the most eminent scholars of his time, Duns Scotus.
In the Reformation the works of the schoolmen fell into disfavor with the reformers, and Duns, who was the leader of the schoolmen, was often spoken of with scorn by the votaries of the new learning. As time went by the name of Duns became a byword for utter stupidity.

Not Always Safe.
"Don't you think a man ought to tell his wife all about his business affairs?"
"I should say not. A friend of mine who was about to start on a journey borrowed $50 from a rich old uncle and then told his wife of it. He was wrecked at sea, crushed in a railway collision, or something of that sort, and when his wife collected his life insurance, of course, she felt bound to pay back that loan."

THE FAMILY DOCTOR
Blood Poisoning.
By the term blood-poisoning is meant the presence in the blood of the germs of putrefaction or suppuration, or of the poisonous products of these germs. It is necessary to define the expression at the beginning, for strictly speaking every form of poisoning, including alcoholic intoxication, is blood-poisoning.
There are three distinct forms of blood-poisoning. In one the germs of putrefaction are circulating in the blood and manufacturing their poison, upon which the symptoms of the disease depend; in the second the blood-contained germs are those which cause pus-formation, and they also manufacture a poison which produces the disease; in the third form the bacteria, either of putrefaction or of suppuration, are not in the blood but on the surface of the body, and the symptoms are due to the absorption of the poison elaborated by them.
The toxin, as this bacteria-produced poison is called, is in this last instance imported, while in the first two cases mentioned it is, as it were, of domestic manufacture—therefore obtained more easily and in greater quantity.
These three forms are called in medical language, septemia, pyemia and sapremia, respectively, meaning septic germs in the blood, pus in the blood, and the products of putrefaction in the blood.
The pyemic form is characterized by irregular chills, fever and sweating, and the formation of abscesses in various parts of the body. It is very commonly fatal. Septemia resembles pyemia in its symptoms, except that the fever is more continuous, not being interrupted by chills as it is in pyemia, and there is no formation of abscesses. The severer forms of septemia are almost always fatal, but the disease occurs often in milder type, in which the chief symptoms are high fever, headache, and depression of the vital forces.
Sapremia resembles septemia in its symptoms, as it naturally should, since both these forms of blood-poisoning are caused by the same poison, in one case formed outside of the body and absorbed by the tissues, in the other produced by the bacteria in the blood and tissues. Sapremia may terminate fatally, but it yields more readily to treatment. This consists in management of the wound, opening it up to the air, cutting away the festering parts, cleansing the surface thoroughly, and treating it with antiseptics.

PLAGUE AMONG QUAIL.
The Government Alarmed Over the Spread of the Disease.
There is an outbreak of disease among the quail of the country that threatens serious results. The news is contained in a circular issued by the department of agriculture calling the attention of sportsmen and game dealers to the outbreak and asking for more information on which to base treatment and protective measures, says the Kansas City Times. While not enough is known about the disease to make diagnosis absolutely certain, it is suspiciously like the grouse disease that for 100 years has been playing havoc with the game birds in England. The centers of infection in this country are only just being found, and if more information is gained it is possible that quarantine measures may be resorted to.
The centers of infection so far known are in Kansas, Indian territory, Alabama, Virginia and Massachusetts. The grouse disease has been studied scientifically and has been found to be as definitely a malady as typhoid or diphtheria. The disease, although evidently infectious, seems to be closely allied to pneumonia.
Not enough has been learned yet about the quail disease to establish its identity unquestionably with the grouse disease, but its symptoms and the spread of the infection is much the same, and there is a possibility that it has been imported with the shipment of grouse from England. It is known at least that the quail disease is fatal not only to quail but to the sharp-tailed grouse of this country, and there are grave fears that its wider spread may affect many of the most important game birds of the country.
The first intimation that the department of agriculture had of the disease was when in April, 1908, the bureau of animal industry received three dead birds from a Kansas City dealer. He said that the birds were the last of a large lot that had been steadily dying off. The whole flock would appear well at night and in the morning several of them would be dead.
Some time later the same dealer received a shipment of two dozen blue quail from Wichita, Kas. Nearly all were dead on arrival, evidently from the same disease. Then a shipment was received from Birmingham, Ala. All of these died of the same malady. Then a report was received from Worcester, Mass., saying that an infectious disease was killing off the ruff grouse that were raised for stock purposes there.
You can't always judge a man's pay by the work he does.
It's advice when you give it and a lecture when you receive it.

OLD SORES FED AND KEPT OPEN BY IMPURITIES IN THE BLOOD
Whenever a sore refuses to heal it is because the blood is not pure and healthy, as it should be, but is infected with poisonous germs or some old blood taint which has corrupted and polluted the circulation. Those most usually afflicted with old sores are persons who have reached or passed middle life. The vitality of the blood and strength of the system have naturally begun to decline, and the poisonous germs which have accumulated because of a sluggish and inactive condition of the system, or some hereditary taint which has hitherto been held in check, now force an outlet on the face, arms, legs or other part of the body. The place grows red and angry, festers and eats into the surrounding tissue until it becomes a chronic and stubborn ulcer, fed and kept open by the impurities with which the blood is saturated. Nothing is more trying and disagreeable than a stubborn, non-healing sore. The very fact that it resists ordinary remedies and treatments is good reason for suspicion; the same germ-producing cancerous ulcers is back of every old sore, and especially is this true if the trouble is an inherited one. Washes, salves, nor indeed anything else, applied directly to the sore, can do any permanent good; neither will removing the sore with caustic plasters or the surgeon's knife make a lasting cure. If every particle of the diseased flesh were taken away another sore would come, because the trouble is in the blood, and the BLOOD CANNOT BE CUT AWAY. The cure must come by a thorough cleansing of the blood. In S. S. S. will be found a remedy for sores and ulcers of every kind. It is an unequalled blood purifier—one that goes directly into the circulation and promptly cleanses it of all poisons and taints. It gets down to the very bottom of the trouble and forces out every trace of impurity and makes a complete and lasting cure. S. S. S. changes the quality of the blood so that instead of feeding the diseased parts with impurities, it nourishes the irritated, inflamed flesh with healthy blood. Then the sore begins to heal, new flesh is formed, all pain and inflammation leaves, the place scars over, and when S. S. S. has purified the blood the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is for sale at all first class drug stores. Write for our special book on sores and ulcers and any other medical advice you desire. We make no charge for the book or advice.

When Life Is Wasted.
Life is wasted every time one gives away to gloomy, selfish, angry or revengeful thoughts; when resentment or a grudge against man or fate is allowed to find root in the heart; when the temper is let fly loose over a trifle; when one goes to pieces nervously when obliged to repeat a remark and the voice is allowed to rise in anger; when one forgets that a loose temper is a sign of vulgarity and lack of culture.—Philadelphia Press.
Here is a stereotyped remark you hear frequently from croakers: "Did you ever see so much sickness?"
