The question is often asked in newspapers and magazines, "Who wrote the poem beginning 'In the hour of death, after this life's whim?"

The answer is given that nothing is known of the author. It is true this poem was published with only the initials of the writer in the University Magazine in 1879. But I hold the manuscript of the poem, and I have also Blackmore's letter that accompanied it. Blackmore has been so long dead I do not feel that there can be any harm in giving his letter to the public. I subjoin an exact copy of it; also of his poem. AGNES E. COOK.

"Teddn., Jan. 5, 1879. "My Dear Sir-Having lately been at the funeral of a most dear relation, I was there again (in a dream) last night and heard mourners sing the lines inclosed, which impressed me so that I was able to write them without change of a word this morning. I never heard or read them before to my knowledge. They do not look so well on paper as they sounded. But if you like to print them here they are, only please do not print my name beyoud initials or send me money for them. With all good wishes to Mrs. Cook and yourself, very truly yours, "R. D. BLACKMORE. "K. Cook Esqre LL. D." Dominus illuminatio mea.

In the hour of death, after this life's When the heart beats low, and the eyes grow dim, And pain has exhausted every limb, The lover of the Lord shall trust in him.

When the will has forgotten the lifelong aim, And the mind can only disgrace its fame,

And a man is uncertain of his own name, The power of the Lord shall fill this

When the last sigh is heaved and the last tear shed, And the coffin is waiting beside the bed, And the widow and child forsake the The angel of the Lord shall lift this head.

For even the purest delight may pall; The power must fall, and the pride must

And the love of the dearest friends grow But the glory of the Lord is all in all. -R. D. B. in Memoriam M. F. G.

cried. Binks looked at his watchthree-quarters of an hour till bottle time. He said to himself: "Let him yell. He's a healthy little Indian, and he must be disciplined." Then Binks tried to sleep.

But Binks couldn't sleep. Every cry grew more pathetic and abused and heartsick and discouraged. Each cry said more and more plainly: "I have no friends or relatives. I'm unhappy and uncomfortable and want some one to be good to me."

But Binks, the stubborn and stiff necked, stuck it out, though each cry stabbed him clear through.

Finally (maybe he set it forward a bit-who knows?) Binks' watch announced the arrival of bottle time. He went to the icebox for the food, heated it and took it to his now faintly sobbing infant son.

But the infant son could not take the bottle. He choked on the first swallow, then put up his hands and renewed his wordless plea to the big man he could see dimly through his

Then that father said, "Discipline be hanged!" Maybe, though, it wasn't "hanged" he said, but the vowel sound is right, anyway. He took up that baby, and the baby stuck to his daddy like fly paper. Further attempts to lay him down were futile. He wanted no food but heart food, no milk but that of human kindness. So the big man laid that baby beside him on the pillow; the baby put one rose petal hand to his father's stubby cheek, gave a long, quivering, satisfied sigh and slept for six unbroken hours.

As Binks lay there, afraid to stir lest he disturb the little one and feeling like a horse thief because he had let the love hungry infant cry his heart out, he repeated frequently: "Discipline be hanged!" - Chicago
