Linseed meal in small quantities once or twice a week keeps horses in fine condition.

Last winter we saw a bunch of 85 teers being fed on a farm near during the winter. Aurora, Ill. These cattle stood in a large lot on the side of a hill in mud scan up to their knees. The barn and all cow its surroundings were as filthy as semi could be imagined, and we were not from surprised when the owner, looking in regloomily over his cattle, remarked: "I never seemed to hit off steer feeding to any great advantage." Heavily timbered land does not make good feeding ground for cattle because the sun cannot dry out the ground as quickly as an open lot.

The best feeding shed for cattle is one that is wind-tight on the north, east and west and entirely open or the south.

Of course a paved feed lot is an expensive proposition at the start, but we believe that on a reasonable cost the profit will more than justify the expense. Even if a man cannot afford to pave his feed lot he can drain it with tiling and by the addition of gravel, and small, smooth stones improve its condition at very small cost. Oats make an ideal feed for the lamb during the winter, but he needs about only a pound a day to keep in fine condition. In addition he must have clover hay or alfalfa or corn fodder and turnips and other roots at least three times a week.

A very handy wheelbarrow for the feed lot can be made of either wood or iron. The frame should be very strong, but not heavy. Iron makes a strong frame and very light. It can be made in four sections and bolted together. The iron hoop should be made of one-eighth inch iron and is of a size to admit a common flour barrel up to the second row of hoops. The barrel can easily be put in and taken out. The wheel should be made of wood with a very broad tire, not less than three inches, and four inches would be better. If the frame is made of iron, the handles can be made of wood and bolted on. Wood is better for this purpose.

Do you know that some of the smaller packing houses which cater to first class trade at home and abroad will not buy swill-fed hogs at my cost? They want animals that are fed on clean corn, roughage, roots and

HEALING ART IN NINEVEH

Medicines and Other Cures Employed There 650 Years Before the Christian Era.

The patient work of the archaeologist enabled people in 1911 to form a very fair idea of medical science as it existed in Nineveh 650 years before the birth of Christ. Of the 20,000 tablets taken from the library of Assurbanipal, the great King of Assyria, who conquered Egypt and Babylonia and established his subjects in the deserted cities of Samaria, hundreds deal exclusively with medicine and contain numerous prescriptions:

"If a man has colic make him stand hypericum and he will recover. "Or make him crouch down on his heels and pour cold water over his head. Faith healing seems to be indicated in a prescription which runs "If he is in a weak state, make him bend down, then raise his legs, and say: 'May you get quite well.' Strike him also
