Hymns in Theaters.

In south Wales when the people are pleased with the work of an actor they have a custom of showing their appreciation by singing hymns at the close of the performance. Henry Irving was once playing at Swansea when he was surprised to hear the audience burst into "Lead, Kindly Light," when he appeared before the curtain in response to a call. At the close of the engagement the great actor was deeply touched by the singing of "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," rendered in the most reverent manner.—London Spectator.

Too Inquisitive.

"Bridget, didn't I hear you quarreling with the milkman this morning?" "Sure not. His hired girl's sick, an' I was inquiring after her. But he's an impolite divil."

"How's that?" "Says I, 'How's your milkmaid?' An' he looked mad an' says, 'That's a thrade secret.'"—Kansas City Journal.

A Mean Hint.

"What did she play?" "The 'Last Hope'—such an appropriate selection!" "Why do you say so?" "Because I watched the expression of her features when they heard her begin it."—Baltimore American.

Demure, but Determined.

A bride looks so modest and demure at a wedding that it is hard to suspect her of having bossed the affair with an iron hand.—Athens Globe.

We Request a Comparison, That's All

You can't look at a cigar and judge its flavor. Nor will any wise man try to. But, how many men stop before our show window look at the clothes displayed and then pass on? Compare the shoulders, lapel, the "swing" and the tailoring with any you choose. "Miller Made" clothes will stand comparison.
