SNUBBED BY EUGENIE.
Carpeaux and a Bust of the Empress. He Had Modeled.
One day Carpeaux, the painter, asked Napoleon III, who had always expressed great friendship for him, to permit him to model the bust of the Empress Eugenie. Her gracious majesty admitted that Carpeaux painted, but denied that he was a sculptor and modestly pretended that her beauty was not sculptural.
Napoleon III promised to speak in his favor and invited him to Campagne. Carpeaux went. Eight days passed. The empress did not wish to pose. The invitation to the chateau was for only a week, and Carpeaux was notified to yield his place. "No," he declared, "not before I have made the bust of the empress."
This response was repeated to the emperor, who made another attempt. He ended by obtaining her consent to give a pose of two hours to Carpeaux.
The sculptor asked no more. He made a masterpiece, baked the clay and proudly showed it to the sovereign. She looked at it a moment, made a little moue, said, "Oh yes, it is pretty," and turned her back.
Carpeaux was furious. He returned to his workshop with the bust and threw it upon the floor. It was scratched, but not broken. A workman picked it up. It then went into the possession of Dr. Pournier. Today it is owned by his son, who blesses the Empress Eugenie for not having desired it.—Cré de Paris.

GOT GAY ON THE STAGE.
Irving Spoiled the Scene the Only Time He Broke His Rule.
The note about actors who try to "queer" other actors on the stage, writes a correspondent, reminds me of a story of the only time when Henry Irving was guilty of such a thing. He was acting Othello, to the Desdemona of the late Miss Bateman, and every Saturday night the performance was followed by a very pleasant little supper party.
Desdemona was strangled on a bed at the back of the stage, and part of Irving's "business" was to leave the bed and then, going back to it, to draw the curtains slightly aside and peep in at the body, afterward turning a face of inexpressible anguish toward the audience. His face, his shoulder and the deep drawn sigh which he gave were among the most impressive parts of one of his greatest creations.
As a rule, he sternly suppressed any levity on the stage, but one Saturday night, as he drew back the curtain, he said, in a sepulchral whisper, "What have we for supper, Desdemona? Alas! Miss Bateman was unequal to the strain, and a merry laugh from the corpse rang through the house.
Never again, I believe, did Irving break his own rule of seriousness on the stage. It was told me (adds our correspondent by my father, who was at the supper party on the night it occurred.—Manchester Guardian.

MERCHANTS' CARNIVAL HERE

Manion Claman Players, Opera House All of Next Week in Good Plays.
A number of our local merchants have made arrangements with the Manion-Claman Players to give a week of high class plays, changing plays each night, and they are giving a Merchants' free ticket with every 25 cent purchase. This ticket entitles the holder to free admission, if he is one of the first hundred at the door at 7:30 p. m. when the door opens. One hundred free seats each night. A merchants' ticket and 25c secures a reserved seat, without Merchants' ticket, 75c.
The Manion-Claman Players consist of ten capable players presenting all new plays, with special scenery for each play. They have just completed a year's tour through California and played everywhere with great success.
The Pendleton papers speak very highly of the company, where they are playing this week, and they do not usually play towns as small as Athena, but have an open week between Pendleton and Walla Walla. The company was to have played La Grande next week, but the La Grande house being closed, gives Athena a chance to see six good plays.
Notice.
Beginning Monday, Oct. 6th, we will close at 6 p. m., Saturdays excepted. Mosgrove Mercantile Co.
Bitten by a DOG.
The little two-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Pinkerton was bitten by a home dog at the home of Mr. Pinkerton's father, Tuesday, and when rushed to town in a car, doctors found it necessary to take six stitches in the wound, which was on the right side of the face. The little sufferer was placed under an anasthetic for the operation. He was in the yard alone with the two family dogs at the time, and it was not known for certain which animal did the biting. It was thought they were eating and were interfered with by the child. This is the second case of a child being bitten by a dog within the two weeks, the former case being that of the little son of Robert Cronin of Portland. In that case the dog was killed after a few days, without having shown any indications of rabies. Reports from Portland are that the child is recovering nicely from the bite.

Thrived on Poor Writing.
Illegible handwriting may prove an aid to prosperity. The late Lord Goschen said of his father, "He has told me half in joke and half in earnest that when he came to London he was obliged to forward a firm prospectus. He wrote such a bad hand that no one would take him for a clerk." Of Lord Goschen himself his biographer remarks: "In his latter years he might have spelled as he chose, for no one could have affirmed with certainty how many 't's' he might have put in 'although.' At length his script became undecipherable even by Goschen himself. He could not when speaking in parliament make out what it was that he had put on paper, and he thus came in later years to abandon almost entirely his old practice of making notes."
Song of the East Indian Laborer.
When drawing water from the wells, the man in charge of the operation invariably encourages the bullocks with a cheery sing-song, at the critical moment when they are raising the heavy leather pouch of water from the well, and if he was to remain silent the Indian bullock, who is a strong conservative, would certainly refuse to start. I once listened to the song which the men sang when they were making mortar. It was something like this: "Oh, bullocks! what a work you are doing, going round and round making mortar for the masons. Oh, bullocks! go faster, go faster! The masons will cry out, oh, bullocks, for more mortar—more mortar. So go faster, go faster!"—From "India and the Indians."
Her Substitute For Oil of Birch.
Instead of raking them into the house and giving them the "humming" they deserve, an Atchison woman who was a schoolteacher for many years is trying the following method with her obstreperous children: She calls them to her and says, solemnly and precisely, "My sons, I am surprised at, disgruntled with, disappointed in and ashamed of you."—Kansas City Journal.
Then He Went.
He—As I was saying, Miss Maymie, when I start out to do a thing I stay on the job. I'm no quitter. She (with a weary yawn)—Don't I know it?—Baltimore American.
Didn't Keep It.
Nell—She took her husband's name in vain. Belle—What do you mean? Nell—in other words, she's divorced.—Philadelphia Record.
