Bad for the Laurels.
William Dean Howells, according to the Washington Star, was admonishing a young novelist, who, after writing a fine novel, had produced only slight commercial things.

"Two critics," he said to the young man, "were discussing a certain author."

"His laurels," said the first critic, "already seem faded and bedraggled."

"That," the other critic agreed, "is because he has been resting on them."

In the Customary Place.
A well known English bishop some time since lost his third wife. A clergyman who had known the first wife returned from Africa and wanted to see the grave. He called at the cathedral and saw the verger.

"Can you tell me where the bishop's wife is buried?"

"Well, sir," replied the verger. "I don't know for certain, but he mostly buries 'em at Brompton."—London Mail.

No Wedding Bells.
The mutual friend was speaking: "If you love the girl and the parents on both sides are willing and you have $10,000,000 each I see no reason why you should not be married."

"Just one thing prevents it."

"Yes?"

"Yes. She won't have me."—Spur.

Celluloid Cement.
Celluloid articles can be mended with a cement made by dissolving bits of celluloid in acetone. It takes only a few minutes to make the cement, which is applied like glue. The broken edges are pressed together and in fifteen minutes the cement is hard.
