INCONVENIENCE SOON SEEN.

A Fireside Discussion of "Ifs" in Case There Was a Simultaneous Migration of the Local Merchants and Dealers—Rights Encroached Upon by a Dangerous Outside System.

[Copyrighted, 1914, by Thomas J. Sullivan.]
Napoleon said that imagination rules the world. It is the divine attribute of the imagination that when the real world is shut out it can create a world for itself and with a necromantic power can conjure up glorious shapes and forms and brilliant visions to make solitude populous and eradicate the gloom of dungeons.

Just Supposing.
To better exemplify the range and possibilities of the human imagination we will give a little "imaginary" conversation which took place in the cozy cottage of William and Alice Spencer on a recent evening.

"William, you asked me what I would do if the butcher, the baker, the grocer, the druggist, the shoe dealer, the lumberman, the coal merchant, the hardware dealer and dry goods merchant should pack up and leave town on an everlasting vacation," said Alice. "Why, that's easy. I would get my goods from the mail order houses, of course."

No Catalogue House Credit.
"But," persisted William, "suppose you were broke, as usual?"
"Oh," said Alice, "that's so. I could not get credit from the catalogue houses; neither could I inspect the stock and select the best, nor could I take anything back and exchange it, as in most cases, and if there was anything broken I would have to file a claim with the railroad company, and it would take the better part of a year to settle it, if at all."

And supposing you wanted something in a hurry," suggested William.
"That's so," said Alice. "I would have to stock up like a lumber camp, as it takes from two weeks to the end of time to get anything from those mail order concerns. And, William, I would not want to buy meat by mail; I want to see what kind I am getting. Well, we would just have to live without meat, that's all."

No Garden Truck by Mail.
"Garden stuff—yes, we would want it fresh; no, not by mail, thank you. And bread—your mother could make that, as you always said your mother could make better bread than I. My, but I hope the baker won't go, though!"
Alice cheered up when William smilingly reminded her this was but an imaginary absence of the town merchants.

But the cheery smile on Alice's face lasted only a moment, as William tantalizingly inquired how about getting shoes for her dainty little Chicago feet.
"Shoes!" cried Alice. "Whoever heard of any one with pride or coyness buying shoes without first trying them on—yes, trying on mostly everything in the store? And then what about getting sole while you wait? Oh, no; we must have a shoe dealer anyway," answered Alice.

William Becomes Excited Too.
Then William took the floor and bodied forth the following words of wisdom:
"Yes, hardware; sure I might borrow a pound of nails or a couple of screws from Brother Charles, if he had them, but have you any idea, Alice, how heavy nails and screws and hardware are? No? Well, I have, and freight bills on that class of stuff are ruinous. No, Alice; a town without a hardware store is a lousy town, and if our hardware man is going to move I am too. And, besides, we want a lumber yard and coal yard. I don't want to buy lumber and coal in car load lots."

"But, William, this is only imaginary," said Alice.
"No Dead Town For Him.
"Tell you what, Alice," continued William; "should this imaginary business become real and the retail catalogue houses put our local merchants out of business and force them to seek other locations I'd be with you. I'd go, too, for who could or would live in a dead town? We couldn't."
"And, come to think it over, William, I believe those mail order concerns are encroaching upon our rights and the rights of our local merchants, and I for one am willing to join with you and the rest of the citizens of this community in an effort to adjust differences that will redound to the welfare of the entire countryside, embracing all the people—men, women and children."

The Small Town Killer.
Notwithstanding that this is only an imaginary situation, it is too true that a condition of this sort is to be experienced in thousands of the smaller towns and villages in this country unless some radical change takes place among consumers in checking the growth of the small town killer, the fast forming retail trust.
Why not profit by the imagination of Alice and William?

Why She Held on to It.
Mrs. Wilful—My husband told me if I didn't like the brooch you'd exchange it for me. Jeweler—Certainly, madam. I'll be only too glad, as four different ladies of your set want it.

Economy.
"Oh, Ethel, why don't you use your finger bowl?"
"What's the use o' wastin' this good jam, mother, when I can lick my fingers?"—Life.

By being happy we sow anonymous benefits upon the world.

MIX MAPS AND MEALS.

An Easy Way of Studying Geography While You Eat.

In the dining room of one family there hang two large colored maps, one of the world, the other of the state in which they live.
The parents and children are forming the habit of talking during meals about what they read or hear, of places and events outside the visible horizon. And whenever any unfamiliar place is mentioned one of the children immediately leaves the table long enough to locate it on the map. "It is near such and such a town or river or mountain," "That is where so and so lives," or "Such a thing happened there," is the information usually added to the first statement.

They do not limit their conversation to bookish things, but speak naturally about whatever they are interested in, turning to the maps as one looks at a railroad guide when traveling, to place themselves. In this way bits of knowledge are linked together, and as slight knowledge requires so much less mental effort than ear knowledge it is more fun.

Besides, the maps hang low and in a good light, make a splendid rainy day game for the two younger children, aged eight and ten. The mother, sitting near with her sewing, gives them "hard ones to find" (names of more or less obscure), and they keep score as to which gets the most "firsts," calling twenty the game.
No wonder the whole world seems like one big picture to this family, and geography but a play.—Woman's Home Companion.

LEAPING FOR THE FIRE NET.

Safe Jumps of Eight or Nine Stories Have Been Made.

At a recent Fifty-sixth street tenement fire in New York that resulted in more of a smoke alarm than a blaze a man and his wife were seen to get out on the ledge of a fifth story window. The firemen told them to wait a moment, that there might be no need to jump. The man cried that they were suffocating and must jump.
The firemen stretched the net and shouted for them to poise themselves properly and jump one at a time. But even while the firemen were shouting the instructions the couple kissed each other, locked arms and leaped. They came down straight and sure as a plummet right into the net. They rebounded about fifteen feet and fell in the net again in a sitting posture, still embraced.

The firemen let them gently down to the sidewalk. They still sat there looking at each other incredulously. Then they were told there was not even a good fire to justify their jump. It had all been smoke from a smouldering lot of rags and other rubbish. The man and wife heard the news with expressions of wonder, thankfulness and condemnation of their silliness.
Jumps of eight and nine stories without injuries have been recorded. The makeup of the jumper is what counts. The firemen have to be prepared for all kinds. Sometimes they have to shift a few inches quickly because of the bad judgment of distance shown by the jumper. But in most cases the leap to the net saves life.—New York Sun.

He Still Had It.
"Look here, you swindler!" roared the owner of the suburban property to the real estate man. "When you sold me this house, didn't you say that in three months I wouldn't part with it for $10,000?"
"Certainly," said the real estate dealer calmly, "and you haven't, have you?"

Insisted on a Change.
London Coster (meeting the village idiot)—Go are yer a-lartin' at? Idiot—Oh hean't a-lartin'. Coster—Well, put your face straight, idiot—It is straight. Coster (exasperated)—Well, then, blast yer, bloomin' well bend it!—London Tatler.

Not a Bit Conceited.
Wife—You are positively the most conceited man I ever met. Hub—I conceited? Woman, there's not a conceited bone in my body. Why, another man with the same abilities would be absolutely carried away with pride.—Exchange.

Made Quite a Difference.
Miss Watson—Did Mr. Sark say to you as I entered the drawing room last night? Clara—He that the beautiful Miss Watson? Clara—Yes, dear, with the accent on the "that."—Exchange.

Brick Is Fool-Proof
When you decide to use brick in your building you are sure of one thing—the contractor cannot tamper with the material.
With both lumber and cement you are blindly trusting to the dealer and contractor. The chance is again you for you have no way of knowing whether they are treating you honestly. You may find out afterwards when it is too late.
Don't trust that material man; don't tempt the contractor's honesty.
