Undoubtedly J. M. Swaggart has the most versatile show horse in the Northwest, in "Black Diamond." He won first in the Milton show in the ladies' saddle class. This makes the fifteenth ribbon won by the team.

liful black, and the greater number have been won in the light harness class, against some of the best roadsters in the state. He is a speedy fellow, having shown a 3:20 clip. Of fine style and action, he is a worthy son of Oliventus, a flat trotter and Daisy W., a fleet running mare.

DICKENS' ROMANCE.

His Early Love, Who Jilted Him, and Her Pathetic End.

The story of how Charles Dickens was jilted is particularly interesting. When he was eighteen Dickens became acquainted with the three daughters of George Beadnell, a Lombard street banker. With one of them, Maria (the original of Dora in "David Copperfield"), who was a year his senior, he immediately fell in love, and Maria flirted with him very desperately. But the love making of the future novelist was not treated very seriously, for he was not considered by any means an eligible party, and even Maria herself adopted an attitude of amused tolerance.

For three years the affair went on, and then Dickens renked that his case was hopeless. He pleaded in vain with the girl, whose caprices maddened and gladdened him alternately, for, as a matter of fact, Maria Beadnell was a willful coquette. The end of it all was a reply that held out no hope, and so the parting came. For twenty years they saw no more of one another.

Ultimately Maria Beadnell was married to Henry Louis Winter, and when Dickens met her again time had wrought sad havoc on his youthful ideal. Mrs. Winter wrote to her old lover, but Dickens did not care to renew a correspondence with his old sweetheart. Then Mr. Winter failed, and the chagrined wife appealed to the lover of her girlhood for help, but without avail, and the romance ended long before the death of Dickens in 1870.—Exchange.

THE LADY EXPLAINED.

Then He Probably Smiled, but it Must Have Been a Sickly Effort.

A woman with fifteen bundles boarded the street car the other afternoon when I was on my way to my suburban residence. She was a very pretty young woman. I felt sorry for her. She was returning from a shopping tour. Being a man with a kind heart, I helped her upon the car and piled her bundles about her. A man got on at the same time and took a seat on the other side of the young lady.

When the car came to my street I was surprised to see her rise and begin to pick up her bundles. Instantly my sense of chivalry prompted me to help her off the car, and, as I was going in the same direction, I asked permission to carry her fifteen bundles. The man got off also and started on ahead.

I was loaded down like a camel crossing the desert. In those packages she had everything from an electric flatiron to a five pound bag of prunes. We trudged along about a half mile. The man turned in at a gate.

When we reached this gate the young lady thanked me and said: "This is as far as I go. I live here. Thank you very much."

"But the man ahead of us, the man who came out on the car with us, turned in here too."

"Yes," she said. "He is my husband, but he hates to carry packages through the street."—Brooklyn Eagle.

The father of Thomas Carlyle was a stonemason and a good one, so his son said. The elder was as proud of his stone walls as was the son of his own "French Revolution" when he threw the complete manuscript on the table and said something like this to his wife:

"There, let the world have it. I have put my best blood into it."

But his patience and pride in his work was to receive a severer test. He lent the manuscript to a friend, who did not safeguard it. As a result a servant threw it into the fire. The author was not mirthful by nature, yet he went cheerfully at his work again and for the second time put his best blood into it.—Boston Globe.

PRIZE FIGHTERS AND M'COR-MICK.

John Sullivan or the Boiler Maker Sherkey could not "come back" but not so with the McCormick Binder. While others have been currying favor or with the public she has been testing and perfecting herself till now she comes forth the most "nifty" of them all. Light, trim and powerful as a race horse, built like a watch and with a flexible capacity that thrills the farmer with admiration. The easiest, simplest knotter, spring elevators for heavy or light grain; a ball bearing take up to gears, the lowest platform of them all and other features make it the most attractive binder you ever saw. We also have Walter A. Wood and Milwaukee. Come and get your choice. Eight binders sold to date.

That carload of wire is here. Come and see the best hog fence at 26 cents per rod or 25 cents for cash or good cash.
