 Word is received here of the death of C. W. Hollis, March 29, at his home in Lamont, Wash., of valvular heart trouble. The name of Mr. Hollis was formerly a household word in Athena, where he conducted a mercantile business for twelve years. In 1898 he moved to Oakland, Cal., where he engaged in the grocery business, which was destroyed by the earthquake. He located in Lamont in 1910. Mr. Hollis is survived by his wife, two sons and two daughters. At his own request before death, the body was taken to Portland for cremation. Mr. Hollis was 63 years of age.
 The weather man held aloof at Milton long enough Sunday to allow six usings of play between the Athena and Milton ball teams, and when he took the top off his sprinkler, the berrypickers held a six to three score over Dr. Osborn's lads. Athena's scores came in a bunch in the third inning; this mood we can make out of the tarred score book, which was baptized along with the rest of the bunch. With Brooks on, Stone slashed out a home run aways. Bryan took first by being hit, stole second and romped home on Boynton's stiff single. Slick and King were Athena's battery and Bartholome and Kennick for Milton. Athena plays Weston Sunday afternoon on the home grounds. Milton-Freewater will be entertained at Helix.
 That our old friend, Tom Selall, a full-blood Indian living on the reservation and farming his own land, is to make a sensation at the Panama-Pacific exposition, is indicated by the following, from the East Oregonian: He it known that yesterday Thomas Selall purchased a C-55 Buick touring car to replace his four-cylinder machine, which was too common and small for his station in life and needs. He purchased it for the express purpose, according to his own statements, of taking his family overland to San Francisco and he declared he contemplated dressing himself and family in the warbonnets and other savage finery which he inherited from his ancestors, for his entrance into the exposition city.
 Joseph N. Scott Sunday received a telegram announcing the death of his grandmother, Mrs. Martha Jay Scott, which occurred at her home at Long Beach, Calif. Death was due to old age, she being past 92 years of age. Mrs. Scott is well remembered in this vicinity, where she lived prior to her moving to Long Beach several years ago. She was a native of Rutherford county, North Carolina, having been born January 8, 1828. When still young she moved to Kentucky, when that state was little more than a wilderness and she followed the frontier as it pushed west, going into Illinois when there were few white people there, moving on to help settle Missouri and finally coming to eastern Oregon in 1884. She took up a homestead near this city, and the land is now farmed by her grandson, Joseph N. Scott. Besides J. N. Scott, the deceased has four other grandchildren, Dr. Will E. Scott, Mrs. Retta Potts and Mrs. Fannie Ingle, in this county, and Arthur Scott, in Walla Walla county. Numerous other relatives survive her, among them Mrs. Susie Gerkling of Pendleton, a daughter.
