ARGE INCREASE IS NOTED

Part of National Plan to Augment Production and Conservation of Food Supplies to Meet War Emergency Needs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

More than 700 county agents and mergency demonstration agents are ow at work in the 38 Northern and Vestern states. The increase in agents emergency appropriations be came available was more in two onths than the average yearly increase during any of the past four

County agricultural agent work is conducted by the United States de-partment of agriculture in co-operaion with the various state agricultur colleges and local organizations representing the farmers of the county in which the agent is located. The ounty agent is usually selected by a mmittee representing the county organization, on recommendation of the county agent leader at the agricultural college. There is at present an unusu-ally great demand for men qualified for work of this kind to carry out the plan, adopted under the food production act, of employing an emergency demonstration agent for every agricultural county in the United States not having a regular county agent. This is a part of the national plan to increase the production and conserva-

Agent in Each County. Organization of new counties is rapid, especially in states of the central West, several of which have given assurance that there will be a ounty agent or county emergency demonstration agent in each of their ounties by February 1.

Maine, New Hampshire, Massachus one to all the ribbons and crosses of war, the rank of colonel and fried Delaware already have an agent in each county, while New York, Indiana and Pennsylvania are almost completely covered. Nearly half of the agri-cultural counties in the Northern and Western states are now being served by a local demonstration agent, and indications are that the country can be completely covered before the eginning of another crop year.

One of the most gratifying features of the organization campaign in the Northern and Western states thus far has been that most counties taking up the work are arranging for it on a per manent basis—many of them making plans for periods of three years.

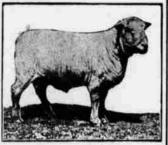

Must Have Thorough Training. The qualification requirement of agents are somewhat different in the various states. Graduation from an agricultural college is not in all case equired, though training substantially equivalent to a four years' course at such college is usually insisted up-on. A considerable amount of farm xperience is a universal requirement and it is preferable that some of this xperience should be secured since ompleting the college course.

Additional information in regard to ounty agent work and the organizaon of farm bureaus can be had by writing to your state agricultural colment of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Mark Twain's Childhood.

Mark Twain used to tell the pathetic story of his childhood. It seems, according to the story, that Mark was born twins. He and his twin looked so much alike that no one, not even their mother, could tell them apart. One day, while the nurse was bathing them, one of them slipped in the bathtub and was drowned. No one ever knew which twin it was that was drowned—and therein, says Mark, was the tragedy. "Everyone thought I was the one that lived," he said, "but I wasn't. It was my brother who lived. I was the one that was drowned."—Exchange. Mark Twain's Childhood.
