AFLAME WITH VIVID COLOR

Section of Northern Montana Brilliant Scene During the Short Months of Summer.

The Blackfeet, or Piegan, as they call themselves, number approximately 2,700. The setting for this picturesque tribe is a wonderful country, without a glimpse of which no picture of the Blackfeet would be complete. Elsie E. Newton writes in the Southern Workman. The reservation is in northern Montana; in area it is about two-thirds the size of Connecticut. It lies up next to Canada on the north and Glacier park on the west. The park was once a part of it, and retains many Indian names, such as Going-to-the-Sun mountain, Rising-Wolf mountain, Two Medicine lake and river, and others.

From the splendid white-topped range on the west the country drops to rolling prairie eastward. It is a region of bitter winds and storms for several months in the year. Closer to the mountains, there is not a month when frost is unexpected, and snow falls as late as June. But as soon as the last flake has disappeared the hill-sides flame almost overnight with wild flowers. The splendor of them continues throughout the short summer, one brilliant shade succeeding another. Half acres in purple, spots of blue, streaks of yellow—one sees this sort of color effect week after week.

Taking It From Babies. "Every ounce of wheat products in excess of six pounds per month that you eat, Mr. American Citizen, is that much literally taken from the mouths of the starving women and children of France," says a Food Administration bulletin. "The armed-civilian may go without wheat, but these innocents will actually die unless we give them of ours in generous proportion."

Victory bread is received with hearty approval. But don't be satisfied to use it on a wheatless day or at a wheatless meal, because it isn't wheatless.

BRINGS HOME GRIM REALITY

Soldiers Seldom Visualize Death Until They Have Had Their Training With the Bayonet.

Comparatively few of the men in the training camps have sensed the seriousness of their job from books, writes Joseph H. Odell, in the Outlook. Nor did it come to many of them from the formal drills, the setting-up exercises, or the acquisition of military terms and habits. The reality—the grim but thrilling reality—of their business came from the bayonet.

Men can stand at attention without paying attention; they can form columns of fours automatically; they can salute as a matter of easily acquired habit; they can learn the bugle calls by subconscious absorption; but no man can wield the bayonet without visualizing death. The first and chief duty of the bayonet instructor is to make men visualize death—their own or his or her's. "You must get him before he gets you; it's him or you, him or you, him or you!"

Then the ghastly seriousness of the business comes over the recruit; the dreadful alternative flashes along every nerve, and commands the muscles of the eyes, the legs, and the arms as they have never been commanded before. It searches his soul and marks him as a coward or a man; it puts deep lines on his face and galvanizes his will; it changes him almost instantaneously from a civilian to a soldier.

BUNYAN ACTIVE TO THE END

His Last Years Busy Though Peaceful Ones and Death Result of Act of Self-Sacrifice.

The closing years of the life of John Bunyan were peaceful, unlike in that respect the years that had gone before, but they were busy years, devoted to preaching, to the work of a pastor and teacher. Of these closing years, Froude, in his "Life of Bunyan," edited by John Morley, writes, "Happy in his work, happy in the sense that his influence was daily extending—spreading over his own country, and to the far-off settlements in America, he spent his last years in his own land of Beulah, Doubting Castle out of sight, and the towers and minarets of Emmanuel "and growing nearer and clearer as the days went on."

His end was brought about by exposure when he was engaged in an act of charity. A quarrel had broken out in a family at Reading with which Bunyan had some acquaintance. The father and son were at variance, and in the hope of reconciling them Bunyan journeyed from Bedford to Reading on horseback. He succeeded, but at the cost of his life.

Returning by London, he was overtaken on the road by a storm of rain and drenched to the skin. This brought on a chill. He reached the house of a London friend, Mr. Strudwick, but he never left his bed afterward. In ten days he was dead. The exact date is uncertain. It was towards the end of August, 1688, between two and three months before the landing of King William. Bunyan was sixty years of age. He was buried in Mr. Strudwick's vault in the burying ground at Bunhill fields.

CAME FROM DAMAGED STOCK

Idea of Blotting Paper Was the Direct Result of Act of Careless Workman.

Blotting paper, like many another valuable discovery, was found entirely by accident. One day in a paper mill in Berkshire, England, a careless workman forgot to put in the sizing and it was necessary to throw out the entire lot as spoiled. Later the angry proprietor sat down to write a note and possibly for reasons of economy used a sheet of the condemned paper. To his increased annoyance the ink spread all over the paper and he was about to give up in disgust when the thought struck him that it might be possible to use the paper for absorbing ink in place of the sand then universally used. After some successful experimenting he was able to dispose of his entire damaged stock under the name of blotting paper.

From that time on blotting paper came into general use. At first it was always pink in color, red rags being used. Red was a fast color and difficult to bleach, hence the red rags were useless in manufacturing writing paper. But as the color of blotting paper did not interfere with its usefulness, red or pink was as good a color as any other, and thus provided a means of utilizing otherwise wasted material.

GLASS STAINED BY X-RAYS

Experiments Have Shown These Produce the Same Effect as the Light of the Sun.

It is well known that glass exposed for long to sunlight acquires a violet tint. In very old houses the windows facing south are often distinctly violet. Experiments recently made in the laboratories of the General Electric company at Schenectady with X-rays prove that these can be used to dye glass in many colors, principally an amethystine violet and an amber yellow, but also green and bright yellow.

These colors, according to Mr. Rosenthal, who conducted the experiments, are due to modifications of the physical structure of the glass and not to chemical alterations. The color can be made to penetrate to any desired depth, from a mere surface tint to complete coloration of the entire substance. And the same method can be applied to tinting porcelain, enamel and precious stones.

An interesting and important fact about this glass that has been colored by long exposure to X-rays is that it becomes impervious to the radiations that have transformed it. Thus it can be used as a protection against the glare of the sun or the snow and against the X-rays themselves.

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Medicine was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Medicine produces such wonderful results in catarrhal conditions. Send for testimonials, free.
