Mounting of Natural History Objects in Their Native Surroundings Add to Their Interest.

In the development of the modern museum three stages have been recognized—that of the collection of objects for record, that of supplying materials for research and that of applying the collections to public education. The educational idea is now being developed by instructive display arrangement, loan exhibits for public and private schools and special lectures. The most notable feature is the mounting of natural history objects in the midst of their native surroundings, and much attention is being given at large museums—such as the American Museum of Natural History of New York—to grouping animals in their natural environment of shrubs, trees, flowers, rocks and other objects. In the new exhibition halls of the museum of the California Academy of Sciences, the case for a large mammal or bird habitat group is 25 feet long, 12 deep and 18 high, with a plate glass front 15 feet long and 10 high. Each of the two halls—one devoted entirely to California mammals and the other to California birds—is 25 feet long by 60 wide and 11 of the large cases have been placed in the mammal hall with six in the bird hall. Skylight illumination gives greater brightness in the cases than outside, preventing troublesome reflection from the glass. As a representative group may be taken that of the San Joaquin valley elk, a species of deer now preserved in a few reservations, and this is shown by several individuals standing or crouching in the grass near tree-bordered water, with low hills in the distance, the painted background seeming a continuation of the real scenery.

Much Property Reverts to Crown.
Few people realize the large amount of property which passes every year to the crown of England owing to the owners dying without heirs or next-of-kin, and without having made a will. In most of these cases the deceased is an illegitimate person with no children.

As a rule the crown does not appropriate the whole of the property, but makes what is called a compassionate allowance to the relatives of the deceased, although they may not be his relatives according to law, and in some cases to friends and servants who have performed services for him which entitle them to consideration. The amount of the allowance is determined by the treasury, or, in the case of the estates of persons dying within the duchy of Lancaster, by the chancellor of the duchy.

The money does not pass to the king himself, but to the nation, and thus goes to relieve taxation.

Imperfect Shooting Laws.
We have federal laws protecting migratory birds during certain periods, and the government has established many reservations for them. But the laws of our various states are conflicting and confusion often results, to the detriment of the birds.

No better illustration of this can be found than with the robin. In the North it is protected all the year around as a songster. It flies to the North early in the spring and is looked after and cared for until late in the fall. It then goes South, where several of the states allow it to be killed, and it is actually sold in the open markets of a number of Southern cities.

But the general attitude of the people toward birds is changing for the better in all the states, South included. We are coming to understand them—North and South—and with better understanding there comes greater encouragement.—Pennsylvania Int.

WASHINGTON STATE NEWS OF INTEREST

Important Occurrences of Past Week Briefly Compiled for Our Readers.

Spanish influenza is steadily decreasing in Seattle.

The fall salmon trout are running in the Cowlitz river and many fine catches are being brought in.

Only four democrats were elected from eastern Washington to the lower house of the state legislature and no democrat to the state senate.

A. B. Crane, a drainage expert sent out by the Washington State College, has been working in Lewis county the past week, laying out ditches for farmers.

Live stock is moving out of the Molson country because of the feed shortage. Marketable beef stuff and feeders are also going out in unusual numbers.

Fifteen persons were arrested at Yakima for working or transacting business in a public place without wearing the gauze masks prescribed by the city health commissioner.

George E. Montandon, widely known on two continents as a mining, civil and electrical engineer, met accidental death in Chile, according to a message received by his sister, Mrs. John H. Scott, of Tacoma.

The annual meeting of the Washington State Beekeepers' association, which was to have been held in Yakima on November 15 and 16, has been indefinitely postponed on account of the influenza epidemic.

The state board of health's first efforts to enforce the wearing of gauze "flu" masks in Walla Walla met with defeat, when a jury in justice court acquitted Attorneys C. M. Rader and E. L. Casey, charged with failure to wear masks in public places.

Driving his car straight into the open draw of the eighth street bridge at Hoquiam, J. C. Walsh, foreman of the Porter camp of the Lytle logging company, plunged with his automobile into the Hoquiam river and was drowned.

Bringing one of the most valuable copper cargoes which has arrived in Tacoma for several months, the steamship Providencia discharged copper matte and blisters from Santa Rosalia, Mexico, at the Tacoma smelter. The copper is valued at $1,144,000.

With but a few scattered precincts missing election returns show that the Tacoma port commission project was passed by a ratio of four to one. In the city the ratio was seven to one and in the county two to one. Only 20 of 74 county precincts gave an adverse vote.

First Lieutenant Frank W. Zink, formerly assistant to athletic director J. Fred Bohler of the state college at Pullman, was recently cited in military orders for bravery under fire, according to word received by Registrar F. T. Barnard from a friend of Lieutenant Zink's.

Under orders from the public health service at Washington, D. C., Captain Emil Krullish, Port Townsend marine hospital, is gathering a force of 10 physicians, nurses, vaccine and other equipment to be rushed to Alaska on a fleet naval vessel to combat the alarming spread of Spanish influenza there.

Two thousand cases of coconut oil thrown into Elliott bay from the deck of a barge by its pounding against the Milwaukee dock at Seattle in a high wind were gathered in by more than a score of owners of small craft and tugs from the surface of the water and returned to the owners at $2 per case.

Every fruit warehouse in the entire Wenatchee district is now filled to capacity with packed apples ready for shipment and more apples are being received daily than are going out. Each day less cars are received than are needed for the day's shipments and there is an accumulated shortage being created that grows daily.

Damage done to crops in Lewis county by the aphid is estimated at $104,085, according to figures compiled by A. C. Burrill, special field agent of the government's entomological department, who, with County Agent A. B. Nystrom, has been covering the county during the past week securing information on the subject.

Seattle and King county's only women candidates at the late election were both successful. Miss Reah M. Whitehead, who has served four years as justice of the peace, and Mrs. O. G. C. Beals, appointed more than a year ago to succeed her brother, who entered the army, were re-elected justices of the peace on the republican ticket.

Japan will spend in the United States a sum estimated at $2,500,000 annually for a number of years for purchase of materials for its battleship fleet, according to a statement made at Seattle by T. Kodachi, engineer commander of the imperial Japanese navy, who, with four other high officers, arrived from Tokio en route to New York.

Prunes grown in Clarke county are among the finest purchased by the United States government. Postmaster J. T. Harris, of Ridgefield, raised a crop of prunes and when they were sold to the government agent recently they were said by him to be the finest he had purchased. Thirty-two and two-thirds prunes weighed one pound.

Virtually complete returns of the election show that the next state legislature will have eight or nine democrats in the house and three in the senate, a gain for the republicans in both houses. Mrs. Frances M. Haskell, of Tacoma, elected to the house from Pierce county, will be the only woman in the legislature. Republicans in the house, on the face of unofficial returns, will have 89 members and in the senate 93.

L. H. Darwin, state fish commissioner, notified Prosecuting Attorney A. H. Lundin of Seattle that an attempt will be made by the state to confiscate the fishing boat of Anthony Pleinch if he is convicted of violating the state fish law. Pleinch is accused of fishing with a purse seine within two miles of the mouth of the Duwamish river. The state law prohibits purse seine operations within two miles of the mouth of a river emptying into Puget Sound.

Telephone rate increases running from 25 cents a month to $2.25 were filed with the Public Service commission, to become effective November 1. The increase is stated to be necessary in order to grant increases to all telephone employees, to be dated from October 16, on business lines. Spokane is raised from $5 to $8.25; Seattle from $7.50 to $8.75; Tacoma from $6 to $7.25. Increases on residence telephones run generally from 25 cents monthly to $1.

All persons in Washington will wear masks hereafter, if they obey the State Board of Health, which has issued this order effective at once. The masks must be of surgical gauze. The masks must be worn in all public places, including street and steam cars, elevators, cabs, corridors, lobbies, hallways, office buildings, hotels and lodging houses, stores, all restaurants, except where the patron is eating food, barber shops, laundries, wash houses, dry cleaning establishments, and all stores where groceries, drugs and other forms of merchandise are sold.

There will be no strike, at least immediately, of the unions affiliated with the Pacific Coast Council of Metal Trades, was the announcement of the council, in session at Seattle regarding the recent Macy wage award. It was announced, however, that the entire council will protest the Macy award, and desires that a committee of seven members be sent to Philadelphia to lay a formal protest before the United States shipping board's appeal division. The council decided to submit the question of sending a committee to a referendum of all affiliated unions.

Adoption of Referendum No. 10, known as the bone-dry law, at the late election, will make it necessary for all druggists in the state to get rid of intoxicating liquors other than straight alcohol within ten days after the law becomes effective. When the referendum act has become a law, druggists can carry no liquor but alcohol, and that strictly for medical, mechanical, chemical, scientific or hygienic purposes, to be sold only to persons licensed by the county auditor to purchase it. Even physicians cannot administer it when adulterated in such form as to constitute a beverage.

Possibility that wheat substitutes may be reduced even less than the 20 per cent figure at which they now stand, by the first of 1919, is expressed in a telegram received by Charles Hubbard, state federal food administrator, from Herbert Hoover, national food administrator. An inter-affiliated food council in session in London, is considering the advisability of removing all obligations against using substitutes with wheat flour. This is brought about, according to Hoover's telegram, by the opening of the Mediterranean sea and the shorter route to Australia, which makes available large supplies of wheat from India and Australia. On the other hand, wheat substitutes now in use, are greatly needed for dairy feeds, where there is a shortage.

The forest service has taken steps to rid the Colville and Mount Hull ranges of all cayuses, in order to accommodate more cattle next season. Owners whose cayuses have been run on the ranges this season without permits have been made defendants in federal cases now pending, and in case the required fees are not paid about 70 head from the Mount Hull range alone will be sold to satisfy the lien. These steps are deemed necessary because of the increasing demand for range for beef cattle. This season authorization was issued for the handling of 6000 head of cattle, but 8000 were run on the north half ranges, while 70,000 head of sheep were taken on where but 40,000 were authorized, elastic measures being adopted to try and help meet the needs of the country in the production of war meat. Hundreds of head of practically valueless cayuses, it is argued, are wasting the range areas.

The Facts in the Case

are that this store's popularity is not due alone to its cheap prices but also to our rule of offering only dependable Groceries. Anybody can sell cheap if qualities are not considered. We have solved the problem of how to sell good Groceries at poor Grocery prices.
