LET SICK MAN DIE

Runs Fail to Provide Medicine for Yankee.

Prisoner Is Victim of Pneumonia and Is Buried With Nine Others.

Winchester, England.—Due to the fact the Germans failed to provide medicine or proper hospital facilities at Camp Tichel, West Prussia, John H. Kohl of Woodhaven, N. Y., died from pneumonia after the armistice was signed, according to Joseph R. Dennen of Trenton, N. J. Dennen was of the Six Hundred and Forty-second American Ambulance unit and likewise a prisoner at Tichel.

"Kohl of Company G, One Hundred and Sixth Infantry, was captured September 27 after twice being wounded in the knee," said Dennen. "Kohl later developed pneumonia through exposure. The Germans gave us only two blankets and a small quantity of coke for our fire. I gave Kohl one of my blankets and we put two pairs of socks on his feet and spread shirts and such extra clothing as we had on his bed to make up for the deficiency in blankets. There were two American doctors in the camp—Lieut. John S. Abbott of St. Paul, Minn., and Lieut. Joseph P. Burke of Pittsburgh, Pa.—and they did all they could, but could not obtain any medicine.

"Kohl died November 18. The Germans stripped the body and placed it in an ordinary box which they left outside the barracks for seven hours before burial. Four Americans and two Frenchmen carried him to the grave. When other Americans tried to accompany the body the guards forced them back. The American doctors, however, pushed the guards aside and ran through the cemetery gate, getting to the grave just as the coffin was lowered. Kohl was the only American to be buried in a cemetery holding 32,000 Russians and Roumanians.

"Nine Russians were buried in the one grave with Kohl. I tied an identification disk to his wrist before burial. After the burial the Germans stuck up a cross which read: 'Nine Russians, one American.'"

The KITCHEN CABINET

The most I can do for my friend is simply to be his friend. I have no wealth to bestow upon him. If he knows I am happy in loving him, he will want no other reward. Is not friendship divine in this?—Lavinia.

GOOD THINGS WE ALL ENJOY.

When chicken meat and the bones are left, too small an amount to serve, add a small piece of veal and when all is well-cooked drop in some of these dumplings with a teaspoon and they will be ready to serve in eight minutes.

Dumplings.—Take one cupful of nice fresh buttermilk, sift a cupful of flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, add one egg and some salt, mix well and drop from a teaspoon, cover tightly and cook eight minutes without raising the lid. Flour should be used to make a drop batter, the amount will vary slightly with the consistency of the buttermilk as well as the flour.

Friendship Village Muffins.—Beat two eggs, add four tablespoonfuls of sugar, two of shortening and one cupful of milk, flour to make a thin batter like griddle cakes; add one teaspoonful of baking powder to the flour. For corn muffins add half cornmeal and the other half flour.

Oatmeal Bread.—Take one quart of cooked oatmeal, one-half cupful of molasses, cool and add yeast cake dissolved in one-fourth of a cupful of water, one teaspoonful of salt and flour to make a sponge. Let rise one and one-half hours, then make into loaves, giving one kneading in the mixing bowl.

Waffles.—Take one cupful of thick sour milk, three tablespoonfuls of melted fat, two eggs, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of soda, and one and one-fourth cupfuls of flour. Mix the salt and soda in the flour, beat the yolks and whites separately; add the fat just before folding in the whites. Cook on a hot well-greased waffle iron.

Raised Muffins.—Take three cupfuls of warm water, half a cupful of fat, two eggs, two teaspoonfuls of salt, two-thirds of a cupful of yeast, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar; stir as stiff as possible with flour, then let rise, stir down, cover closely and set in a cool place. Put into muffin pans four hours before they are wanted. Bake in a hot oven.

ENDLESS CHAIN NOT MYSTICAL
Doctor Fighting Influenza Explains How Curative Serum Went From Patient to Patient.

The prevalence of influenza and pneumonia with their high death rate makes it imperative to resort to heroic methods of treatment rather than to follow the accepted ones only. The lack of serum or other specific remedy for influenza, writes Dr. Charles R. Humbert in the Medical Record, together with the inability to obtain antipneumococcus serum forced me to use convalescent serum.

The Endless Chain.—It is a well-known fact that persons convalescing from pneumonia have antibodies in their blood streams. As soon as the patients' condition permits, therefore, they are bled as much and as frequently as possible.

Serum is prepared and treated, and is placed in stock. When another patient comes in with pneumonia, treatment is begun. When convalescence sets in the above procedure is repeated. It is a case of one gives serum to two, two gives serum to three and so on, the procedure becoming endless.

Censor's Office Boy.

It must be the censor's office boy who is responsible for some of the vagaries of the blue pencil. Not long ago some patriotic soul quoted Kipling's line from the "Recessional," "The captains and the kings depart." He had the surprise of his life when the word "kings" was struck out. But worse is now reported. Another scribe, greatly daring in the mentless days, quoted Thomas Hood's joke in an article on "Wayside Graves," or something equally solemn:

"So they buried Ben at four cross-roads
With a stake in his inside."

That was too much for the censor's office boy. A stake in his inside, indeed. The censor's office boy knew if he knew how to spell that the food controller would never sanction a whole "steak"—a nice, succulent, juicy steak, in anybody's inside. So he deleted the offending lines. Who shall say that we are not ardently patriotic people?—London News.

Judging by reports from abroad the soldier's query now is "When do we go from here?"

The formalities of return visits among nations promise years of joyous anticipation.

We shall remember 1918 as the year in which tradition and precedent were measured for their shrouds.

We can't expect our wheat to take treatment for sun and other ailments without it costing us more.

Egyptian Wrote First Will of Which There is Record.

Papyrus on Which the Desires of Utah Were Recorded Has Recently Been Discovered in a Good State of Preservation.

Utah, the Egyptian, looked out from beneath his shaggy eyebrows across the Nile, where the eternal Pyramids shimmered in the heat against the cloudless sky. Gods of Egypt! How dim were those piles of stone! In the bright light of the sun god, Ra, he should have seen those man-made mountains clearly.

Shades of his ancestors! His eyes were dimming fast! He was getting old—very old, so he suddenly realized. He looked into the basin of the fountain in the courtyard. The image reflected made him conscious, for the first time, of his swiftly approaching end. He sank down upon the fountain's rim and mused upon the shortness of life, its varying fortunes and the prospects of the future life—according to the beliefs of himself and his fathers.

Ah, well, he was ready to die. He did not fear after death to take the journey with the sun god, Ra, in the Boat of a Million Years to the Fields of Peace. No, by Amen, the god of Thebes! Had not Utah led a good life?

Yes, he had always been just, merciful and kind to his servants and his household. They had lacked nothing while he lived, nor had his wife, Sef-tu, the daughter of Sat Sepdu.

But, after he was gone—ah, Pharaoh, the great one who gives life to his people—would his memory be sufficient to keep her from want or mistreatment? Would she ever be set out of the great stone house as the widows of others had been in the past?

A chill, sharper even than the chill of old age, shook him. It was the chill of fear for his beloved.

Then a happy thought warmed his veins again.

The people of his household and his city ever had listened and obeyed his spoken and written word during his life. His words by voice or writing were considered authority and whole-somely respected. Doubtless, then, would his written words be followed when he was in the Fields of Peace. Strange, neither he nor anyone else had thought of such a thing before.

So with reeds, fluid and papyrus he wrote in beautiful picture writing.

That happened more than 1,500 years ago. However, the papyrus has kept in a good state of preservation all those centuries and was recently discovered by excavators. Translated, it proved to be the will or legacy of Utah, allowing his wife, "Sef-tu, daughter of Sat Sepdu of Gesab," four Eastern slaves and "the right to dwell in my house without allowing her to be put forth on the ground by any person."

The "will" is considered by authorities to be the first ever drawn.

Buttons and the War.

Buttons are not generally regarded as one of the great articles of commerce, yet a report issued by the federal tariff commission presents some astonishing figures regarding the magnitude of the button industry and the capital invested therein.

There are more than 500 button-manufacturing establishments in this country, representing a capital of approximately $20,000,000 and an annual payroll of $8,000,000. The annual value of the products is more than $20,000,000. New York has almost half the factories, but the middle West supplies most of the fresh-water pearl.

The war has put up the price of buttons, owing to the advance in the cost of metals used in button manufacture, and the increased price of celluloid sheets and all subsidiary raw materials, such as dyes, chalk, acids and canvas. It is interesting to learn that the war has stimulated the business in this country and has led to the manufacture of glass buttons, which formerly were imported—another instance of beating Germany at its own game.

She Saves Fuel.

A little old woman, wearing a woolen dress, a black silk jacket and a little round hat, entered a surface car at a transfer station yesterday, her arms so filled with a great bundle of rumbled newspapers that she could barely keep her balance.

"We've got to conserve," she said cheerfully to another woman who held a seat for her, as she tumbled into a seat, making a dive at the same time for an evening paper that some one had left lying there. "Is this yours? No? Well, the government says we've got to save paper," she continued, as she added this last one to her already big package; "and I'll tell you it saves a lot of wood when I make my coffee in the morning."—New York Times.

Model Village in Belgium.

At the initiative of M. F. Malfat, director of the architectural works of the city of Brussels, specialists are studying at present a project looking toward the creation, on the boundary of Great Brussels, of a large village for workmen which will be, as far as the authorities permit, annexed to Brussels city. It will be a garden city, conceived after the most recent esthetic ideas of cities and especially destined for workmen and small shopkeepers. Special attention will be provided for work at home.—From Belgian Bulletin.

GETTING POTASH FROM MARL

New Jersey Shore Farms Take Big Jump in Value Since Project Started.

Shrewsbury, N. J.—Owners of farms along the shore having marl under the soil are being offered big acreage prices for their land. It is said, by companies organized to mine the marl for the potash it contains.

The war cut off the potash supply from Germany and the quantity that was stored in this country has been exhausted. A satisfactory process has been found to extract the potash and make it cost much less than has heretofore been paid for it abroad.

Some of the farms are bringing hundreds of dollars an acre. The Charles McCue farm, near here, of 40 acres, sold for $21,000.

GET MORE HEAT FROM COAL

Georgia Man Has Formula Which He Says Will Get Maximum Warmth From Fuel.

Decatur, Ga.—The following formula for getting the maximum amount of heat out of coal is by L. F. Scott:

First, get the coal.

Put three pounds of soda or saleratus in four gallons of water. Dissolve and sprinkle over coal in sufficient quantity to leave some frosted, when solution evaporates.

If the coal does not now burn brightly and give off more heat there is something the matter with the soda.

THEY GOT WATER AND COFFEE

All Because One of Their Comrades Knew a Whole Lot About Mules.

Paris.—There are few people who can understand the temperamental disposition of a mule, much less cope with it. Corporal Bert L. Jennings, Jr., of the Marine corps could do both. As a consequence he and Sergeant Claude A. Miller were able to furnish an exhausted battalion of men with hot coffee and give them strength to clinch their victory in the Chateau-Thierry sector.

It was on a night near the end of the war that Jennings and Miller braved the torrent of a German barrage and drove two carts of water and hot coffee through the clouds of poison gas and bursting shells to the Second battalion of the Fifth Marines, who were holding a section of Belleau wood against a terrific German counter-attack.

They brought the first load through safely and were about to return for more when a shell fragment cut the harness of one of the mules and he escaped. Jennings started in pursuit but the animal seemed to fear him and would not let him approach. Then the freckle-faced farm lad from Wisconsin realized that it was his gas mask that frightened the mule. Despite the poisonous gas heavy about him, he drew a deep breath, jerked the mask from his face and approached the animal, which immediately recognized him and submitted to control. Then he replaced his mask and the corporal and sergeant continued to carry out their perilous mission.
