ATHENA, OREGON, MARCH 10 1922

The esteemed Oregonian again voices its dissatisfaction over the manner in which Woodrow Wilson handled the war, quoting Walter H. Page in support of its criticism. Mr. Page and The Oregonian are of course entitled to their views that the United States should have entered the war at an earlier period. It is in order, however, to remind the Great Only that the war was won, and results are supposed to count. Had it not been, that paper's editorials might now be subjected to the disapproving scrutiny of a German censor. Our own theory is that Woodrow Wilson exercised infinite patience and remarkable wisdom. He waited until Germany's fell purpose to "strafe" and humble us was so apparent to all that he could have a united country behind the government—united, that is, with the exception of those who could not forget their racial ties and were for Germany first, last and all the time.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas reads something into the four-power treaty that isn't there when he says it is "an alliance based on force; it imposes on the United States the same obligation to help other nations contained in article ten of the League of Nations." No such meaning is expressed or implied, and Robinson and other democratic senators know full well that they would be for the treaty were it sponsored by their own party. Their motive is clear to the country. It is based on the "get even" feeling that animates the small boy who has been bullied by his playmates. If it be true that Woodrow Wilson is opposing the treaty, he cannot escape the same interpretation of his mental processes. It will be a further betrayal of the narrow partisan streak in his nature that kept him from taking rank with Abraham Lincoln.

A plesiosaurian monster, an amphibian of the mesozoic order, is still alive in Patagonia. It doesn't say so itself, but our zoological editor has reliable scientific information to that effect. We may yet decide to import this strange creature for the purpose of terrifying non-advertisers.

We've a notion that such city people as do the most jazzing and joy riding, and pay high prices for low booze, are those who howl the loudest about taxes and contribute the least to community enterprises.

The controller of the currency describes the proposed service certificates as "the worst kind of frozen credit." At that they may afford more comfort to the veterans than "the frozen face."

The new bonus plan is all right from the standpoint that Uncle Sam will thus be enabled to display his gratitude without straining anything much except his imagination.

Glad to be informed by the Sinn Fein manual that the Irish question is not a religious one. It certainly presents no aspect that we would care to consider as religious.

Strange it did not occur to President Harding that by coming to Oregon for his vacation he could have gotten farther away from the United States senate.

The Oregon Journal must have a good heart, since its circulation is so gratifying. This has passed the hundred thousand mark for its Sunday issue.

Probability is that if the bolshevik delegates do not ask for bread in the right tone of voice at Genoa, they will be given a stone.

The democratic senators are out to harpoon Lodge—which is fair sport enough if they do not likewise mangle the four-power treaty.

It is unlikely, however, that Europe will be able to "set her house in order" until Uncle Sam agrees to help in the housecleaning.

It must be helium gas that flows from congressional orators, else the capitol dome would go skyward if someone lighted a cigar.

"If Ford can't make a cheap fertilizer at Muscle Shoals, what are the fertilizer people mad about?" asks the Palatka News.

And yet we do not feel so bitter toward the house of representatives as the ultra republican Boston Transcript. It says: "It has broken more pledges, it has succumbed to more pernicious propaganda, it has trespassed in more directions upon the executive authority than has any one of its predecessors in twenty years." The remedy is obvious, although this may not occur to the Transcript: Elect democrats to congress.

Referring again to the grave situation in Ireland, the whole blooming island is doing its best to qualify as a grave yard.

Lloyd George and his colleagues are having a warm time of it, which may or may not be due to the coal in coalition.

Happily for Margot Asquith, she finds much to criticize in America, since that was her obvious purpose in coming.

The Russians are modest enough to merely demand equality at Genoa, when they have more money than anybody.

London chorus girls are directing attention to their toes by painting them. The ends perhaps justify the means.

The prediction is natural that those involved in Portland's white and black scandal will have a checkered career.

Cordial relations between neighbors are less commendable when the cordial happens to be alcoholic.

The Alaska girl who is traveling 1700 miles to be married might even go farther and fare worse.

Not without reason, the United States will now be accused of putting the "no" in Genoa.

If you are asking us, we wouldn't like to dub around in Dublin nor to be fast in Belfast.

Of course you've got to puzzle over a tax blank, demit, on account of the blank tax!

Speaking of the long war, the On Leongs apparently hear the Sings on the Hip.

When it comes to resigning, England doesn't care to let George do it.

The German mark is merely down. Only those who bought it are out.

Ireland wants to play a lone hand—with a loan in it.

Doughty Pickax Passes.

In the hands of lax laborers the pickax becomes the irritation, despair or anger of humor of the average observant man. Symbol of toil, properly speaking, shirkers have turned it into mockery of labor because of the carefully calculated leisure which they swing it. By their methods these cat's-paw clock watchers changed the pickax into a visible sign of leisure.

But without knowing it these leisurely pickax wielders were working a change of great importance. They were attracting the attention of men whose business it is in life to see that work is done promptly, efficiently and economically. From these men has come the air hammer or air pick in its street work a New York company has used one of these new implements with a gasoline engine and air compressors mounted on a large motortruck behind it. Where 15 men were hired to do the street job there are enough to do the work with this instrument.—New York Herald.

Anglo-Irish Treaty Wins in Committee

London.—A spirited debate in the house of commons in the resumption of the discussion in committee stage of the Irish bill, during the course of which all the Ulster members walked out, was followed by acceptance of the operative provision of the bill giving the Anglo-Irish treaty force of law, and the adoption of an amendment dissolving the southern parliament and providing for the holding of elections not later than four months after the passage of the act.

Novelist Lost Vogue.

During the deluge of "realism" Mrs. Southworth's vogue as a novel-writer declined, but the older generation, or the older generations, remained faithful to her and her books sold well. Mrs. Southworth had furnished much entertainment for young and old people for more than fifty years, but there came a time when age forced her to restrict her output. At least two of her novels were published after her death, and during her life and after his close many of her stories were republished, and there were numerous "new editions."

Daniel Boone's Mark.

That Daniel Boone, famed Kentucky hunter, made an expedition into Wayne and Lincoln county during his career is the belief of a party of lumberjacks who recently discovered the name "D. Boone" chiseled in a large rock at the mouth of a cave on Pond Fork of Four Mile creek, Lincoln county, near the Wayne line. The forms of the letters are said to correspond with the name of Boone which is found carved in the rocks of Kentucky. The rock bearing the name in Lincoln county is located in a remote and wild section.—Huntington (W. Va.) Advertiser.

CHANGES IN MAPS OF WORLD

Almost Impossible of Belief Has Been the Increase in Knowledge in the Christian Era.

Mapmakers are having a busy time in these days of ever-changing boundaries. Europe has regrouped itself, and the old map of our school days is wrong from top to bottom.

But what tremendous changes have taken place in the Christian era, a comparatively short time in the history of the world, observes a writer in London Answers. The Roman's map of the world was the Middle sea—the Mediterranean—and the lands washed by its waves. To sail out of the Straits of Gibraltar—the Pillars of Hercules—was as great an adventure as being shot in a rocket to Mars would be today!

For another thousand years, after the decline of Rome, very little progress was made. India was a sort of fairyland, China—or Cathay—might have been in the moon, Russia and Siberia were wholly out of bounds. America was not dreamed of, Australia had never been heard of, no European ship had ever sailed on the Pacific ocean.

Then, quite suddenly, came the age of exploration. The Spanish and Portuguese navigators, followed by the great English adventurers, doubled the world's land area for the mapmakers. But even then the maps were fearful and wonderful. America was a piece of all guesswork. The greater part of Africa the same. Even Europe looked like nothing on earth, and where they were at a loss they drew fabulous beasts and birds to fill up the spaces.

BRINGS BACK ACTION OF BRAIN

Remarkable Power of Smelling Salts When the Seat of Reason is Violently Affected.

When Carpenter sent that one terrific blow against Dempsey's chin in the second round of their battle for the championship, and Dempsey staggered, dazed by its force, one of his seconds applied a bottle of smelling salts to his nose.

When a woman faints, smelling salts are placed beneath her nose, and she revives.

The reviving effect of smelling salts is due to the ammonia they contain. Aromatic spirits of ammonia have the same effect. Ammonia is a very powerful stimulant to both the lungs and the heart. In full strength, the fumes of ammonia are intensely irritating to the lungs and throat, as any freeman who has helped to put out a burning factory in which ammonia was stored can testify. In a very weak solution it irritates only sufficiently to stimulate. When inhaled, the gas affects the nerves ending in the nose, throat and lungs; so quickly do these carry the news to the brain and so instantaneous is the response by way of the pneumogastric and other nerves that the lungs expand to draw in air and the heart at once pumps more rapidly.—Buffalo Express.

Dog Biscuit for Breakfast.

Judge Jenn H. Norris tells the funniest true story of domestic difficulties. Here it is:

In the tragedy of misunderstanding, it is a relief to run across a case that is strictly humorous. Entertainment of this sort was furnished in one instance by a husband, arraigned for nonsupport, who declared that he had left home because he had been given dog biscuit for breakfast.

"That ain't no foundation for a hard day's work!" he complained. "I always have oatmeal porridge in the morning; but that precious pup was sick and wouldn't eat his regular fare. So the missus gives him my porridge, and then breaks up his biscuit and tries to pass it on to me. Wasn't that enough to make any man leave home?"

Asked if she liked the dog better than she did her husband, the woman burst into a pean of praise for her spouse.

"The dog's a delicate little thing and awfully fussy about his food," she explained. "I thought if the dog biscuits didn't hurt him they certainly wouldn't hurt a strong man like James."

The trouble ended in a complete reconciliation.—American Magazine.

"Indophen Blue" a New Shade.

"Indophen blue" is the name of the novelty over which the dye men are puffing out their chests like pouter pigeons and declaring that "American chemists are fully the equals of their German rivals in resourcefulness." In the present instance they have gone beyond, for try as they have the Germans have not obtained a blue of this type possessing all the desired properties.

The color is brighter and slightly more violet than indigo and closely resembles bronze-indigo. Its great resistance to light, surpassing that of indigo itself, is a property that delights the dyer, while it equals indigo in a number of other customary tests, including that of boiling.

This discovery will be greeted with applause by textile manufacturers.

Flowers Preserved in Ice.

A wreath of western Australian wild flowers recently arrived in England to be placed on the Unknown Warrior's grave in Westminster abbey. The wreath was frozen in a solid block of ice, and when the flowers were thawed they proved to be just as fresh as when they were gathered, in spite of their six weeks' journey through the tropics.
