WHAT'S COMING TO HIM.

The minions of the law are waiting for the opportunity to capture a boot- the world. legger who is selling moonshine liquor to minors in Athena. For sometime it has been known that boys here have been securing liquor from some source, and the source is said to be under surveilance by the authorities. The minute conclusive evidence is secured and the law has taken its course, short shift should be given the culprit's residence in Athena. Saturday night, an Athena youth, soused to the ears in moonshine was escorted home by Marshal Taylor, after he had made himself obnoxious by his rowdyism on the streets. Had the officer known that a lady residing on Third street had been frightened by the lad's riotious conduct, he would probably have jailed him instead of leading him home. A sweating-out process in court might have elicitated the information the officers are seek-

Julius Meier, father of the "1925 exposition" is back from Europe, where he went to educate the nations into participation in the international fair. Mr. Meier returns converted to the realization by personal contact with economic and material conditions over there, that of all European nations, but one, little Switzerland, none will be able to take part. He finds over there a battle for bread with little or no means to secure it, in place of financial ability or inclination to exhibit impoverished and broken industrial effort. This is as Mr. Meier saw it and as it is reported by him after his arrival in New York on his homeward voyage, To this clearcut, impartial reasoning of one who perhaps had more interest in the proposed exposition than eny other one man in the state, Mayor Baker of Portland, says, "Damn the torpedoes; go ahead." Simmered down crux of the situation is that if Portland holds her fair it will be one of national scope, but not of international proportions, and if Portland property owners still desire to tax themselves to the tune of three million dollars to pay for their exposition on narrowed marginal lines, we up-staters, should worry.

"Among the most powerful evidences that morality is being reduced to a law ebb, we notice that suicides are becoming almost as common as house burglaries." This sounds like a modern wail, but it was printed in The Oregonian fifty of Pompeli, or during the reign of the Pharaohs, is also quite evident from ancient inscriptions. We have no monopoly of evil in A. D. 1922, and perhaps are not quite so degenerate as we sometimes fool our selves into thinking we are.

It would appear that Mr. Hall's name may lawfully go on the ballot, but that he may not, if elected,

The Audience Smiled.

I introduced the speaker of the eve ning to a large audience, and sat down behind him on the platform.

In the course of his address, wishing to illustrate a point, he said, "You remember, don't you, a few years ago when J. D. Rockabilt had to have an operation for appendicitis he had a first year medic student perform his operation?"

He turned and, seeming to speak almost directly to me, he asked, "didn't

Not wishing to appear uninformed upon a question that I was so manifestly expected to know, I nodded genially and said quite distinctly, Yes, I remember."

It was pointed out that the drainage would make necessary the construction of a number of new canals. One speaker pleaded that the building of new villages and factories near the polders should not be left to mere chance. Vil-lages with churches should be built near the canals, but industrial works would prove of advantage to shipping, and would prevent any pollution of the polder water. A number of the water-ways connecting the Zuyder zee ports are to be preserved, but wherever polders form a continuation of the ex-isting land, new harbors will have to
