U. OF O. LOOKS FORWARD TO PROSPEROUS FOOTBALL YEAR

Under the leadership of Captain John J. McEwan, new head football coach, and Harry O. Ellinger and Bob Mautz, line coaches, the University of Oregon football team is in its third week of strenuous practice. The players are slowly adapting themselves to the West Point style of play.

Oregon expects to have a great football year financially. In four of the five conference games on Oregon's schedule, the Webfooters will be in the limelight. Thus, they play three home-coming contests and are one of the principals at the dedication of a stadium.

The three homecoming games will be at Eugene, October 23, when they will face Stanford; at Pullman, November 13, when they will line up against Washington State college and at Corvallis, November 20, when they will face the Oregon Aggies. On October 9, Oregon will play Washington in the game that will dedicate the new Multnomah stadium at Portland.

Slow Growths of Oaks

England's famed oaks are disappearing. Many oaks were cut down during the war, as the wood was urgently needed. Said a botanist: "The wood of an oak is not really any good until the tree is four hundred years old, and people today cannot afford to grow oaks for posterity. Originally large parts of England were covered with oaks. The tree is almost a rarity now in some places. It is said that an oak takes 400 years to grow to full size, is mature for another 400 years, and takes 400 years more to decay. In some cases I should say this is true."

CROP SURPLUS DISCUSSED TOPIC AT SPOKANE MEETING

Farmers of eastern and central Washington and northern Idaho, including officers of several cooperative organizations, meeting at Spokane, discussed the problem of surplus crops and decided to call a meeting of Washington and Idaho farmers in March to form an agency to dispose of their crops.

The group asked that wheat farmers throughout the United States withhold their wheat from the market until such time as the industry can be put on a "paying basis." They requested Washington State college to collect information as to the effect of surpluses on prices for the last ten years and give this information to farmers.

The policy of Washington State college of encouraging production in the face of "national over-production and resulting low prices," was attacked and defended, by different speakers.

Golf Bulbs

Little Joan had been promoted to a garden of her own, and Joan's father had been using strange oaths about the diminution on his stock of golf balls. He was perambulating the garden when he noticed a curious whitish protuberance in Joan's section, and investigated. The culprit was summoned. "Well," she said, "you did say that you wished you could grow golf balls in the garden 'cos they're so dear, so I thought I'd try for a surprise. And I've watered them every day, and now you've gone and spoiled everything." And Joan's father, regarding half a dozen muddy objects, stole away with a sense of guilt—to buy more balls and to find a hiding place for them.—London Chronicle.

Two Oregon Towns—May Consolidate. Milton, Or.—Petitions are being circulated with the view of submitting to the citizens of Milton and Free-water the question of consolidating the two towns.

League's Aid Asked in Border Dispute. Geneva.—Following closely upon the action of Greece in appealing to the league of nations to settle a boundary dispute between Greece and Turkey, a conflict in the Baltic suddenly loomed on the league horizon when Lithuania filed a vigorous protest against Poland, alleging that the recent Polish frontier actions constituted a "new invasion of Lithuanian territory by Polish troops."

"You have got to have a plow!"

"The pick and shovel never built up a country; you have got to have a plow."

The wagon train divides in the desert. One branch bearing of gold in California rushes southwest across the mountains; the main train continues northward to Oregon.

At this dramatic point in the film version of Emerson Hough's great story "The Covered Wagon," the old leader of the Oregon train gazes fondly upon his plow which he hopes soon to sink into Oregon soil. He is not distracted by thoughts of California gold. "The pick and shovel never built up a country," he says. "You have got to have a plow."

Since the days of the pioneers of "The Covered Wagon" Oliver plows have been helping build up this country. Sturdy and practical, three generations of American farmers have depended on them to prepare the land. As new methods in construction and improved methods of agriculture were discovered, Oliver quickly put them to the test and passed on to users of Oliver plows the most up to date implements.

You have got to have a plow. This is just as true today as in the days of which Emerson Hough wrote in "The Covered Wagon." Modern Oliver plows and tillage tools assure their users today largest possible yields as did their predecessors of an earlier day.
