Tree of Vast Age

A tree trunk of record size, that grew in the coal-making forests millions of years ago, has been discovered by Prof. Sari Noe, paleobotanist of the University of Chicago. The find was made in a coal bed of the Carbonate formation, near West Frankfort, Ill. The circumference of the ancient trunk is ten feet, and the length of the section unearthed about five. The whole tree, as it originally grew, may have been in the neighborhood of 100 feet high. Doctor Noe says. The surface of the trunk is covered with close-set pits, which are the scars where the leaves once grew. These ancient trees had few branches, and the leaves grew all over the trunk, like the scales of a fish. The name of the genus, "Lepidodendron," means "scale tree."

Add Motoring Perils

One of Attleboro's fairest little maidens has been having a rush job done at the dentist's. A broken tooth needed expert attention. It was no ordinary mishap, the breaking of that tooth. She and he were motoring and while kisses were being exchanged the car hit a particularly rough spot in the road. There was a facial collision in which lips proved ineffectual bumpers, two sets of teeth met head-on—and then came concern on his part, lamentation on her part, and the enlisting of the dentist's services to repair damages sustained in an unusual way.—Boston Globe.

Complimented

When an Edinburgh councillor was traveling to London there was an old man in the same carriage to whom he spoke several times without getting a reply. Just as they neared the end of the journey the old man leaned forward and asked, "Are we near King's Cross?"

The councillor told the old man that he thought him very ill-mannered for not replying when spoken to earlier in the day.

Said the aged traveler: "Man, I was feared to answer ye. Ye are awfu' like a photograph I saw in the paper of a murderer."—London Tit-Bits.

The Great Smith Family

The great family of Smiths bear a name which is not only the commonest but the oldest in the world. Professor Mahaffy, when deciphering the Patrie papyrus, came upon one bearing the name of Smith, unmistakably written. "We have never," he says, "found anything like it before, and it is surely worth telling the many distinguished bearers of the name that there was a man known as Smith in the twentieth year of the third Ptolemy, 227 years B. C., and that he was occupied in brewing and selling—beer!"

THE WOMAN HATER

(Adapted From "The Eleventh Virgin")

A Thrilling Melodrama of Swift Lives

With

Helene Chadwick
Clive Brook and John Harron

The story of a man sworn to hatred who lived to love more deeply than he could hate.

Why is it that it is so much more fascinating to weave rosy, romantic dreams about the man who is indifferent to the charms of the gentler sex? Also, why does it usually happen that the "woman hater" who is a part of almost every community, somehow seems to be the most eligible and desirable catch? It's a very interesting subject for thought, and lends itself so admirably to the pros and cons of discussion that it has frequently been the central theme of novel, essay, play and motion picture.

Thomas Meighan

In

The Man Who Found Himself

Another Big Special Meighan Story By

Booth Tarkington

A Prison Tale Which Countless Millions Will Hail as Meighan's Greatest Picture

Like "The City of Silent Men" "The Man Who Found Himself" is a prison story. It was written especially for Tom by Booth Tarkington, America's foremost author of popular fiction. Tom has the role of the happy-go-lucky son of a rich small-town banker. His family is prominent and looked up to. The bank smashes, and Meighan's kin become criminally liable to the state. Rather than see his respected father and brother go to jail, Tom, who has always been considered a no-account anyway, assumes responsibility and is sent to Sing Sing. Virginia Valli plays opposite the star in the production.
