"Miss Nobody"

Beautiful But Broke

Shimmering gowns—marble halls and satin walls. She left them for the open road—crooning steel wheels whirling over steel rails at night—lashed to the brakebeams—a lurching couch for a restless woman—a magic carpet of adventure carrying her to—what difference where? Just so long as it was away. "Shebo" they called her, "Miss Nobody," but her greatest adventure came when she found that a girl cannot masquerade a woman's heart under man's clothes.
