The first step in the enactment of humane legislation was taken in 1822, when a bill providing punishment for the ill treatment of cattle was introduced into the British parliament by Richard Martin, an Irish nobleman, later nicknamed by King George IV "Humanity Martin." To Richard Martin belongs the credit for the first conviction under the law for the protection of animals. The misused animal was dragged into court to show evidence of its master's cruelty, and the driver was found guilty. Two years later, Martin formed a society for the enforcement of his anti-cruelty act. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was thereupon organized. From this society originated the American Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, founded in New York in 1868 by Henry Bergh.

Fred Thomson

And

Silver King

In

"The Tough Guy"

The pound of big action, the flash of scenic thrills, the glow of human interest and the bond of friendship between a man and his horse are vivid highlights of "The Tough Guy" in which Fred Thomson and Silver King caper blithely across the screen for the entertainment of their admirers. As foreman of the Bar-O Ranch, he is called "The Tough Guy;" although as a matter of fact he is merely hard-boiled as a pose to keep his hold as foreman over a tough bunch of hands. The boys of the Bar-O enjoy their little murders and other sports, but taken all in all they are not so bad, at that.
