In another of his big, clean comedies—it's one big roar of hilarious, fun-provoking situations.

Those who have seen Buster Keaton in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Battling Butler" are unanimous in declaring it one of the greatest comedies of his career—and that's not forgetting "The Navigator," "The General" and his other big hits. Keaton as the young idler who wins a girl by posing as a champion prize-fighter—with disastrous results—will raise such shouts of laughter as are only heard once in a long, long while.
