No Great Competition for These Odd Jobs

Although at the present time almost every profession is overcrowded, there are still a few that have only one follower.

For instance, out of the seven and a half million people in London there is only one moss gatherer. Twice a week this man pushes a barrow to a spot several miles out of the city, where he gathers his moss, and later sells it for decorative purposes.

At the last census taken in England a man stated that he was a walrus mustache collector. The hairs are used for the purpose of making toothpicks, and as far as is known he is the only person who follows that profession.

There is only one lady veterinary surgeon in England. A British firm employs a man whose job is simply to strike matches in order to test them.

Still another of these unusual jobs is that of toad breeder. There is one man who does this, and he sells his toads to gardeners for the purpose of destroying insect pests.

There is no overcrowding in these jobs!

Natural Pendulum

A giant pendulum, formed by a strange freak of nature, swings in Yellowstone National park, not far from Old Faithful geyser, according to the official government naturalist in charge of the lecture and nature study work of the United States national park service. It consists of the trunk of a lodge pole pine, suspended by its top between two other trees of the same species and swaying by its base, so that a mere touch will set it to swaying. Apparently the tree fell or was blown over many years ago, its top becoming lodged in the tops of its neighbors, which grew out and surrounded it, supporting it securely. Subsequently several feet of its base rotted away, leaving it suspended in midair. One of the park nature trails has been run near this strange natural grandfather clock, and tourists are permitted to set it swinging.

Language and Life

The one supremely significant fact in the universe is, to quote Peabody's fine paraphrase, "the transformation of language into life." The belief is one of immense antiquity, though only of recent years susceptible of scientific explanation—the belief in the strange bewildering identity of sound and life. It has been claimed that all the visible creation in its countless forms has been built up sound-wise, upon a system of harmonic vibration—that, in the shell, the fern, the fir-cone, the reptile, the fish, the bird, the same laws prevail that govern the stretched string, with all their harmonic progressions and "associated wave-lengths."

Explaining Law Term

Barrrary is an old term of English law, derived from an Italian word signifying to cheat. Common barrrary consists in habitually stringing up or maintaining quarrels or lawsuits, or in continually disturbing the peace by brawls, or in taking or detaining possession of property the right to which is in dispute. Habitually breeding discord between neighbors is also barrrary. In marine insurance and in contracts relating to shipping generally, the term barrrary means any fraud or knavery or willful wrongdoing on the part of the master of the ship or the crew, by which the interests of the owner are injured.
