Racial Mark Plainly Seen in Place Names

While most of the states of the Mississippi valley, besides countless rivers and lakes in all parts of the country, bear Indian names, but a small number only of the towns that are the work of the white man have adopted names borrowed from the original owners of the land. Not one in ten, it is claimed, of the 150 large cities has an Indian name, if we except Chicago, and among those that have it is usually an adaptation from some neighboring lake or stream.

The early explorers and settlers have left their racial mark. Up the Hudson and Mohawk the trail of the Dutchman is pretty clear. The French influence in northern New York and Vermont and along the line of the Great lakes is familiar in many names. Mississippi has no "salts" in its list, whereas across the river Louisiana, by nine parishes and many towns, rivers and lakes, perpetuates the religious tenets of its early fathers. Kentucky and Tennessee evidence the vocabulary of the hunter and trapper, Montana and Idaho that of the miner. All the region acquired from Mexico, particularly southern California, maintains in its place names the memory of its Spanish explorers and settlers. There are relatively few Indian names on the Pacific coast, strange to say. North of the Spanish belt capes and towns frequently reflect the loyalty of early settlers to the older states of the Union; for example, Portland, Ore., which was named after Portland, Maine. The story is that two settlers to whom the task of selecting a name for the Oregon settlement fell were easterners, and that they tossed a coin to determine whether the town should be called Boston or Portland.

Bottle-Raised Apple Tree Something New

Milk-fed chickens and even milk-fed porkers are no novelty, but did you ever sink your teeth into a milk-fed apple? It seems that a Brockton matron was about to set out a young apple tree and sought the advice of a nearby storekeeper as to how it should be planted.

He advised digging a hole large enough to hold the roots. Then a short section of garden hose should be put in place, reaching from the surface to the roots, before the hole was filled in. Milk, poured down the tubing every day, would give the baby tree nourishment until it got strong enough to take care of itself.

Some time afterward he inquired of the lady how the tree was getting on. "It is doing finely," she replied. "I give it milk every day, as you advised." The storekeeper looked stunned, then raised his hands in despair.

"My Lord!" he gasped. "Didn't you know I was only joking about that?" The bottle-raised little tree no longer gets its daily ration from contented cows, but maybe when it begins to develop apples they will have a creamy flavor.—Montreal Family Herald.

Diet for Sailors

The serving of proper food at sea has always presented great difficulty. People not familiar with naval service often wonder what the sailorman eats while away from port. In 1794 each man got one pound of bread, one pound of pork, one-half pint of beans or peas, four ounces of cheese and one-half pint of distilled spirits a day. As late as 1887 the diet was built around bread, salt, or pickled beef or pork, peas or beans, potatoes, cheese, sugar, coffee and tea. A typical breakfast of the up-to-date man-of-war consists of chilled grapefruit, french toast, soft-boiled eggs, bread, butter, coffee. Dinner brings vegetable soup, pot roast, gravy, creamed corn, combination salad, pie, bread, butter and coffee.

Telephone Efficiency

When is an inch equivalent to four miles? The answer is when you hold your mouth away from a telephone transmitter. When you place your lips at an angle to the mouth-piece or show your aloofness toward this mechanical ear in some other way, you thereby push your listener miles away from you.

W. A. Jackson, superintendent of telegraph of the Michigan Central railroad, figured out this loss of speaking efficiency and sent a memorandum about it to all his employees. He advised: "Talk directly into the telephone transmitter at a distance of not more than one-half inch, using a clear, moderate tone."

Uncertainty of Life

Ah, fool! why dost thou think to live long, when thou art not sure of one day? How many have been deceived and have been unexpectedly snatched from the body? How often hast thou heard it related such an one was slain by the sword, another was drowned, another falling from on high broke his neck, this man grew stark in chewing his food, that other came to his end when he was at play? Some have perished by fire, some by steel, some by pestilence, and some by robbers. Thus death is the end of all; and man's life passes suddenly like a shadow. Who will remember thee after death, and who will pray for thee?—Kansas City Times.

Remarkable Work of Hindu Stone Carvers

The majestic stone carvings to be found on all ancient buildings in India, gigantic Buddhas, the bulls and the marvelous bas-reliefs are among the wonders of the world. Equally marvelous are the fretted walls of old Mogul palaces. Futehpore Sikri, and the forts at Agra and Delhi. Wonderful artists and craftsmen have worked on this hard sandstone and left us a world's heritage. We stand amazed at their skill and patience. They do not work like that in this, our day.

But the humble craft of stone cutting thrives, says a writer in the Statesman, of Calcutta, wherever stone quarries are found. The red hills of Rajputana send masses of stone to Agra, and these on the outskirts of the city are the factories of the patient toilers who chip and cut by hand, contriving grinding stones and dishes and bowls with the same instruments that cut the stones for the Taj, and carved and fretted the screened palaces of the fort.

We Can't Have Everything

A few days ago Ruth, age four, was having her hair curled, as she was preparing to "go visiting." Ruth enjoys the process, but of course, it was rather monotonous for her mother, who had to do all the work. "Ruth, I wish your hair had a few natural curls in it," said the mother beginning to lose patience. "Well, mother, I guess I can't have everything," sighed Ruth. "You see, I have a pretty face."

Onion Always Popular

From the earliest times of which there are authentic records the onion has been highly esteemed as an article of food. In desert regions it was used also as a preventive of thirst by travelers and soldiers on the march. The original home of the plant, of which there are many varieties, was probably southern Asia or the borders of the Mediterranean sea. Egyptians cultivated the onion at the dawn of history.—Detroit News.
