TO THE RESCUE

Although the American farmer is still waiting for "relief," the department of agriculture hasn't been idle all summer. It has just discovered 13 new ways to cut up and serve lamb, and in a message to the American people it announces, with pride, that there are other things to a sheep beside lamb chops and leg o' lamb.

MORE JUICE FOR LESS MONEY

The manufacturer finds that domestic electric rates in the United States have declined 11 per cent since 1926. During the same period standards of service, in most localities, have been materially improved.

For years, at each session of the grand jury, that body has brought in a report condemning the present antiquated and unsafe county jail. With the exception of a few minor repairs and the plugging up of holes made by escaping prisoners, the old cellhouse retains its unsatisfactory and unsafe condition.

The Post Office Department, in order to facilitate the handling of Christmas mail, has asked that business concerns in large centers suspend, so far as is possible, the mailing of quantities of circulars, catalogues, etc., from December 16 to 26.

George Clemenceau, war-time premier of France, died as he had lived—an eccentric, but a great man. His last words will find a place in the sayings of noted men: "I want no women and I want no tears; let me die before men. . . Let me be carried into the silence of daybreak toward the Vendee forest. There, beside my father's coffin let mine be placed, erect like his. As in life, so in death I want to remain erect."

In spite of the tremendous progress made in industrial safety work in recent years, we are still a long way from perfection. According to James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, if all establishments had adopted the program of the National Safety Council, one-third of the 24,000 lives lost in industrial accidents during 1927 would have been saved.

French Convicts Under Stern Rule of Silence
In France's modern prison at Fresnes-Rungis, 1,250 white-masked prisoners live in absolute silence. They neither see each other's faces nor hear their voices. From the moment a metal number is hung around his neck, the prisoner is required to wear a white hood whenever he leaves his cell, and he may not speak to his fellows. He sees the face of his guard from time to time, but no other, unless he is sent to the hospital or to the warden for discipline.

Much Trouble Avoided by Straight Thinking

Most nervous disorders come from conflict. What does that mean? There are in thousands of men and women ceaseless struggles between the thing they ought to do and the thing they know they ought to do. It is the struggle of one part of the nature of man against the other.

Primitive Sea Cookery

Hutchinson's Treatise, published in 1781, tells of the cooking arrangements on the vessels at that time. It seems that a slab of metal was placed on the deck and a cauldron of water suspended by a tripod placed over it. A fire was made, either of coal or wood, depending upon the availability of either, and the salt pork was boiled almost constantly.

Found It an Apt Simile

A country girl, whose imagery was necessarily limited, once in the presence of Gilbert K. Chesterton compared the sea, which she saw for the first time, to a cauliflower. At first this seemed ridiculous to the essayist, who is a past master of simile, having once compared his own portly self to a mountain.

SCHOOL TOPICS
(By E. E. Coad, Supt.)
There is an art of education and a science of education. These are not the same. An art emphasizes the skill or dexterity with which a thing is accomplished, while the science emphasizes what things should be done and why.

The average individual rather holds to the idea that the sort of educational procedure that taught him what he knows must be all right and should be the yard-stick for present day evaluation. That his closest friends do not agree with his dictum merely gives point to the fact that educators themselves do not agree.

It is difficult to develop a science that relates to the mental activity of human beings. Such a science would, of necessity, be based upon accurate knowledge of the mental machinery of humans. For many years so-called psychologists have been talking about such a science, but the most of them have been merely dabbling their toes in the edge of the immense pool of the "whys" of action.

Like the English, we are muddling along. But education is not giving the value it should for the expenditure involved. It is worth what it costs, no doubt, but the possibilities are so much greater than the accomplishment that one can not help but express impatience at times.

Why were Greek and Latin once mandatory subjects? And is Latin going the way of Greek? What are cultural subjects anyway? Is the cultural value in the subject, or does culture result from doing the thing one does in the very best manner one is capable of doing it?
