OLD MAN BOREAS RIDES GOLD WAVE

Athena Has Five Inches of Snowfall Sunday, Brings Total to 12 Inches.

Old man Boreas continues to ride on his cold wave over the Northwest states. He has been shooting zero weather in alternate gobs, crossing up his program with snow storms.

After dishing up below-zero temperature last week, he rushed in a snowstorm Sunday. Approximately five inches of new snow fell in Athena, leaving a total of 12 inches on the ground Monday morning.

Then the thermometer turned and zoomed down to 14 degrees below zero. At 11:30 p. m. Sunday night the mercury registered 5 above, the downward plunge taking place in the early morning hours of Monday. Furnaces and heating stoves are kept blazing hot day and night to keep Athena homes comfortable. It is taking lots of fuel for warmth, but as there is no apparent shortage at this time no complaints are heard.

A few homeowners have reported bursted water pipes, but as a rule care is being exercised in this respect. Sidewalks have been reasonably well kept free from snow. The through streets were given the once over Monday morning by Charley Payne, who hitched his mules to a snow plow that did satisfactory service.

Auto stage service on the Oregon-Washington highway was not interrupted seriously. The Athena highway crew kept the road open by the timely use of snowplows and the crews were enabled to keep close to their time schedules.

The Walla Walla valley has nearly a foot of snow, which is fine and dry and should a stiff wind prevail, traffic is liable to be retarded by drifts.

Four inches of new snow greeted residents of Portland Sunday, and city put on 450 men and 120 trucks to remove it through the arteries of traffic.

East of Portland the storm assumed blizzard proportions and for a time the Columbia highway was blocked.

The John Day highway, the Arlington-Heppner road, the road to Molalla and the Canyon road out of Portland were closed. Motorists traveling from Portland to Beaverton or Forest Grove were advised to go by way of Terwilliger boulevard. The Evergreen highway east from Vancouver, Wash., was open only to Washougal.

The most serious trouble was between Astoria and Seaside and between Yamhill and Tillamook.

The mid-Columbia region was covered with a 22-inch blanket of snow following one of the most severe storms in recent years. State highway crews were making desperate efforts to keep major traffic arteries open, but were being handicapped by slides on the Columbia river road.

With the mercury hitting 10 below, the lowest this season, and with the barometer reading the highest ever recorded, Walla Walla Tuesday shivered under a bright sun.

Kitchen Range Explodes In the Baptist Parsonage Fortunately No Injuries

Due to a frozen water back in the kitchen range at the Baptist parsonage, occupied by Rev. Dow and family, it exploded with a terrific force Wednesday morning.

The explosion literally demolished the range and scattered broken fragments of iron, live coals, ashes and cinders over the kitchen. Fortunately the family were in the dining room, and the members thus escaped injury. Had they been at the breakfast table in the kitchen, where they would have congregated a few minutes later, undoubtedly serious consequences would have resulted.

Rev. Dow tried the faucets before kindling the morning fire and they were found to be running freely. After a while he joined other members of the family in the dining room. He had no sooner entered than the explosion occurred. The swinging door between the kitchen and dining room was forced open and a portion of the range and cinders were hurled through it into the room, a range door narrowly missing Jack Dow, where he stood.

The concussion which forced the dining room door ajar found its vent there, and thus saved the windows in the kitchen from destruction. Ice formed in the water back, within a few inches from a partition which was warmed by an oil stove in the bath room.

After the disaster, Mr. Dow and family breakfasted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Richards. Insurance is carried on the parsonage residence, but none on the contents.

"Highest" Court in United States

"Pilot," said Judge Albert Stephens, "in the absence of our bailiff, leave the controls for a moment and come back here and call this court to order." And so was opened the first aerial court in the history of the country—in fact the highest court in the world. For when it was opened it was cruising toward San Francisco 7,000 feet above Los Angeles county in a Western Air Express plane. As soon as Judge Stephens became accustomed to the hum of the three motors, he began taking testimony in the condemnation suit brought by the county against the San Gabriel Canyon Development company, to force the latter to give up gold claims near the site of the great San Gabriel dam.

Pilot of Wrecked Plane Known At Walla Walla

Walla Walla.—Basil Russell, pilot of the tri-motored plane which crashed near San Clemente, Calif., Sunday evening, killing 16, was well known in Walla Walla where he formerly lived. He came here from his home at Hermiston and spent 18 months in Walla Walla, rooming with Laurence Tharpe. He left in 1924. He was about 28.

"He developed into a wonderful aviator," stated Tharpe, "but the storm combination in California was too much for him."

Russell was in Walla Walla the last time at the first air derby here, flying for a Portland outfit and taking most of the prizes. He did a lot of stunting.

When he was doing flying here he had an old machine, and made two flights for the Walla Walla Union.

He started once for Colfax to pick up a newspaper engraving which had been sent from Spokane as far as Colfax by stage, intending to deliver it to the Union. His machine fell near Dixie and was badly damaged, but he and Murry left, who was riding with him, escaped unhurt. Again he started for Waitsburg to drop some papers from the air, and his machine went down. Walter (Billy) Cushman, then a reporter for the Union, who was riding with him, received some injuries.

Pythian Lodge Visited By Neighboring Members

Pythian Lodge, No. 29, K. of P. held an especially interesting meeting Thursday evening of last week, when Harold Kirk was given the rank of Knight. A number of visitors from Milton, Weston, Adams and Pendleton lodges were present to participate in felicitations of the evening, and assist in conferring the rank.

An appetizing and succulent feed was provided by a particular bunch of good steeds who are familiar with the how, when they served liberal portions of steamed clams and crabs with trimmings galore.

Despite the inclement weather, thirty-five Pythian Knights were on hand to enjoy the occasion.

Drive On Rabbits

Farmers in the west end of the county are preparing for a campaign of poisoning jack rabbits in that section. It is reported that sufficient snow now covers the ground to make war on the long eared denizens of the sage brush effective. Poisoned grain and alfalfa hay is placed in the runways of the destructive bunnies, and it is expected that thousands will be killed by this process.

Pioneer Business Man

Charles S. Jerard, a pioneer of Umatilla county, and for many years a dealer in agricultural implements at Pendleton, died in that city last week at the age of 69 years. Athena Farmers Meet To Form Local Cooperative Monday, January 27th

Farmers of Athena and vicinity will hold a meeting at the Standard Theatre, Monday, January 27, at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of discussing the formation of a local cooperative marketing organization. The principal speaker will be A. R. Shumway, who will address the meeting on general plans of local cooperative organizations and their relative status with the federal farm board in marketing grain.

Since the Eastern Oregon wheat growers conference at Pendleton last week, farmers throughout the county have taken much interest in the proposal of cooperative marketing, and a number of local organizations are about to be formed.

Arrangements for the meeting at the Standard Theatre were made by W. O. Read and the time set, 10:00 a. m., is considered the most convenient to facilitate attendance.

Athena Loses to Weston and Defeats Pendleton

The local town team was nosed out by the Weston team in the last two minutes of play in the game Thursday of last week. The score was 24 to 20, at the end. Monday night of this week Athena redeemed herself by swamping the Pendleton team, 29 to 16.

Athena took the offensive in the first quarter of the Weston game, running up a score of 9 to 1. At the half they began to tire and Weston crawled up within three points, the score at half time being 13 to 10. The local lads held the lead until the final two minutes of play and then Weston forged ahead.

The contest Monday evening was fast from start to finish. Athena was on the offensive most of the time, and was never behind in scoring. Although Pendleton used two teams, the Athena boys managed to keep in pace and showed no signs of tiring. Team work on the part of the Athena basket tossers was an outstanding feature and due to winning the game. All of the subs were given a chance to play against Pendleton.

Eddie McMurdo, Whitman college player refereed both of the games in fine form, with fairness to both sides.

Mildred Crimmins Died At Pendleton Friday

Athena friends of the family, were shocked to hear of the death of Mildred, ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Crimmins, former Athena residents, at Pendleton, last Friday.

The little girl was taken ill in class at the Washington grade school in Pendleton, only last Wednesday. She was immediately taken to St. Anthony's hospital, grew rapidly worse until the end. At first it was reported that death was caused by infantile paralysis, but an autopsy performed after death disclosed that the cause was diabetes, complicated with tubercular meningitis.

Funeral services were held at Walla Walla Monday afternoon at 2:30, the remains being taken to that city for burial.

Mr. and Mrs. Crimmins and three children were well known in Athena, where Mr. Crimmins for two or three years was employed in the Preston-Shaffer mill here and the children attended the grade school.

Jensen To Plead

Everett A. ("Bud") Jensen, son of a Walla Walla merchant, driver of the automobile which collided with a bus at Seattle, January 12, as a result of which four coasters lost their lives, was charged with manslaughter on four separate counts, in information filed in superior court at Seattle. Bail was set at $2,500, the same as before. Jensen's counsel, has indicated his client will plead not guilty on the ground that the accident was due to neglect of the city in failing to provide proper barricades for a restricted coasting zone.

Sportsmen Cooperating With Game Commission In Protection of Birds

Game birds in Umatilla county are no doubt hard pressed for food on account of snow covered ground and cold weather. However, as in the past, feed will be placed for the birds wherever possible. Last winter local sportsmen and others provided food for pheasants and partridges, and will do so in the present emergency.

The state wide bird feeding program launched by State Game Warden Harold Clifford will be a complete success, he announces.

Splendid co-operation has been received from various state sportsmen's organizations, the Isaak Walton league, the Oregon Humane society and individuals, he reported and ample feed is being provided for the starving birds.

Game birds, whose normal habits during storms of the present nature is to hunt a warmer climate, are suffering the most, Mr. Clifford said, and every effort to relieve them is being made by the game commission.

More than five tons of cracked wheat and mill screenings, admirably suited for bird feed, was purchased by the commission from the Crown mills at Portland, and reports of donated portions of grain have been received from various portions of the state.

"We were notified that the sportsmen of Lane county have collected more than $400 to provide feed for the song birds of that area," Mr. Clifford said, "and that the sportsmen would take care of all the birds in that section. Wherever this is being done, the game commission will lend assistance when it is needed, but we intend to serve those quarters of the state where such aid is not being rendered—in places where there are no towns or groups of sportsmen."

Athena Boys Win Game, Girls Lose at Pilot Rock

With the temperature way, way down below zero, Athena high boys and girls' basketball teams motored to Pilot Rock Friday evening to keep an appointment. The boys were rewarded with victory, coming out ahead of the Rock with a score of 22 to 13. Athena led all the way through.

The girls' team lost out by one point, 22 to 23. Athena led most of the time, and only in the last minute of play did the Rock girls collect the point that won them the contest. Considerably complaint is heard over the referee's decisions.

Athena boys play Weston high on the local court tonight, and it is expected that the game, which is the first of the present season between these teams will be hotly contested. Tomorrow night Athena boys and girls go to Echo for one of the two annual games with Echo high school.

Feed the Game Birds

County Game Warden Albee issues warning through the press of the county, that unless game birds are fed, many will perish as a result of deep snow and cold weather. Mr. Albee says: "It is now time for people to feed the birds. Pheasants and ducks are suffering and I wish that people would put out grain for the birds. Donations of feed will be most welcome. The place for the feed is along the rivers and streams. It is best not to scatter too much feed in one spot for if snow comes, the grain is covered up and wasted."

LEGISLATURE COSTS ARE AT VAIRANCE

Washington State Session Is Found To Be Lower Than Oregon.

That it costs the state of Oregon more to legislate than it does the state of Washington is disclosed in a recent dispatch from Salem.

Figures compiled by Secretary of State Hoss show that the cost of the 1929 session of the legislature, in addition to the per diem and mileage of members, was $121,494.41. It was a 50-day session.

The Washington legislature continued 60 days and cost $107,312.80. Over $14,000 less than the Oregon assembly, although Washington has 138 members to Oregon's 90. Although the Washington senate has 42 members to Oregon's 30 the former employed only 18 stenographers to the Oregon senate's 28, the total salaries being $5400 at Olympia against $8665 at Salem.

In Washington stenographers served as committee clerks also, while in Oregon the senate had 33 committee clerks and 15 desk clerks, costing the state in salaries and wages $10,851.50 and $5,280 respectively. The report says the cost of the senate committee clerks at Olympia was less than half that of Oregon's senate.

In the Oregon house of representatives 55 stenographers were employed by the 60 members, their total cost being $13,680, some receiving as much as $10 a day. In the Washington house the 96 members used only 17 stenographers.

The Oregon house also employed 61 clerks who received $17,123 and 16 desk clerks who received $6,090.

The cost of printing and other incidental expenses in the Oregon legislature totaled $59,796.91. Printing and supplies for the Washington session cost $14,477, with $17,331 added for printing the session laws. Incidental printing costs and indexing cost $1596 and $800 respectively. It cost the state $2200 to broadcast Governor Hartley's inaugural speech, and this was charged to legislative expense.

By the day the cost of the Oregon session was $2,724.94 and the Washington session $2,578.25.

Counting the per diem and Mileage of members the Oregon session cost $136,246.96 and the Washington session $154,690. The Oregon cost was a reduction as compared with the 1927 session which cost $160,540.18.

University Gains 12 Students

University of Oregon.—Enrollment of full-time students at the University of Oregon has reached 1184, it is reported by Earl M. Pallett, registrar. This is 12 more than were signed up at this time last year. With students who completed their studies at Christmas and others who have dropped out until later the actual campus census now stands at 2900, a gain of 62 over this time last year. The university eliminated 37 students for failure in studies at the end of the fall term, while many others completed work for their degrees. These latter will receive their diplomas at the regular graduation exercises next June.

New Thermometer

A new thermometer has been installed at the Preston-Shaffer mill in the Northwest part of town. The new instrument is supposed to record temperature accurately and will take the place of one that formerly registered the mill site as being the coldest spot in Athena. It at once proceeded to "show up" the old thermometer by registering 18 below zero Monday night, when others in town went down as low as 26, and Tuesday night it said 17 below.

Few Autos On Streets

It is easy to find a parking place in the business district these days. Very few private autos are to be seen downtown, and they usually are not left very long at a time on the street, because of the rapidity with which they "freeze up." Storage garages are doing a big business.

Cold Closes School

The cold weather forced the closing of school taught by Miss Glea Sias, near Hermiston, for the remainder of the week. Miss Sias is at the home of her parents in Athena, until such time as the weather moderates sufficiently to permit opening of her school again.
