DESTRUCTION OF THE SCHOOL PROPERTY
(Emery Rogers)

You people, generally idle in studying and industrious in carving and wrecking, why do you cut on the school's desks and destroy any of its property that attracts your notice? Don't you know that school belongings are as much yours as any ones? The money to buy school property is derived from taxes of which your parents pay a part. Would you destroy property in your own home and make it ugly? Then why the school's? But that is not the main point I wish to express. You are sent to study, not to carve your initials upon a good desk so as the younger generations coming up, will wonder who they belong to. If students come to school to destroy instead of to gain knowledge, they should be sent home where they can destroy the woodpile, I have seen certain students try for a whole noon-hour to tear desks loose from their fastenings on the floor. If these students had spent this time in mastering their school work, how much better it would have been. There is too much of this sort of thing going on in the Athena high school. There is hardly a desk, including the lately acquired ones, which is not scratched and scarred. Their beauty and value have depreciated very rapidly. Every student, who is caught in the act where it can be justly proven that he has been responsible for the crime of destruction of school property should be forced to pay to the school the cost of the damage done.
