HEART ATTACK FATAL TO GEORGE JOSEPH

Death Comes To Republican Nominee For Governor At Camp Clatsop.

The state of Oregon was shocked when the sudden death of George W. Joseph, republican nominee for governor, was announced from Camp Clatsop Monday forenoon. Senator Joseph had gone to the military camp to view the military maneuvers of the Oregon national guard and suddenly expired from heart failure while conversing with General White, commander of the guard.

Physicians in camp assigned the cause of death to acute dilatation of the heart, actuated by gas resulting from a hearty breakfast and the exercise attending even the quiet horseback ride of but a few minutes' duration.

The senator had been the guest of General White at breakfast, and appeared to be in especially fine humor and health. Members of the general's staff were kept at the breakfast table for an hour while the guest of honor regaled them with stories.

Sensor Joseph arrived at the Tex Rankin airport in Portland Saturday night about 6 o'clock, where he was met by W. C. North of Portland. The two then motored to Seaside, where they arrived about 11.

Sensor Joseph appeared to be in fine spirits, and got a good night's rest Saturday night, Mr. North said. Sunday he attended the memorial services in front of headquarters of the Oregon national guard for the late Lieutenant-Colonel William S. Gilbert, for 32 years chaplain of the Oregon national guard.

He remained about the camp until 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon, having been General White's guest at lunch. Together with the officers of the guard he spent the day taking it easy and appeared to be in good health.

After returning to Seaside, he went for a walk on the beach and spent some time talking to Lieutenant-Colonel Ritesa, chief of staff, retiring a little after 10 o'clock.

He ate a very hearty breakfast, according to those present—two eggs, a slice of ham, cereal, French toast and a cup of coffee. With General White he walked to the picket line, about a quarter of a mile distant.

Sensor Joseph had many personal friends in Umatilla county. Saturday he was one of the principal speakers at the Pioneers Reunion in Weston, and delivered an interesting address there. At noon he was in Athena and took lunch with local friends at the Athena Hotel.

His sudden death creates an almost unfathomable political situation from the republican party viewpoint in the state at this time. Nominated for governor in the republican primary election over active opposition on the part of the regulars and the fact that he had been disbarred from practicing law, Joseph's victory was a popular one. John W. Kelly, political writer for the Morning Oregonian, leading republican newspaper of the state which opposed the nomination of Joseph, said:

"Death of George W. Joseph, republican nominee for governor, completely upsets the political situation in Oregon for the second time in six months. His sudden passing leaves a vacancy at the head of the party ticket and now the responsibility of selecting the republican nominee for governor rests with the republican state central committee. Thirty-six committeemen will speak for the 287,000 registered republicans.

"The state central committee can do as it sees fit in the matter of picking a standard bearer for the general election. The committee can, if it so desires, select one of the unsuccessful opponents of Joseph in the recent gubernatorial primaries, or it can discard the primary aspirants entirely and find a new man for the place.

"The committee has the entire state of Oregon from which to make a selection.

"If it sees fit, the committee can arrange for a republican state convention, designate how delegates shall be selected, and when the convention has expressed a choice, the committee can make choice of its own nominee.

"One thing is certain. The committee will have a strenuous time before it finally performs its authorized function of naming a nominee for governor and the committeemen can expect to be lobbied in behalf of a new crop of aspirants as well as imported in behalf of the defeated candidates of the recent primaries."

Potential Value of Columbia River Declared Large and Favor Action

At a meeting of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, the Morning Oregonian says the potential value of the Columbia river from the standpoint of navigation and power and the paths that may be followed to realize on this unused asset were the topics of discussion.

W. D. B. Dodson, general manager of the Portland Chamber of Commerce, speaking for the Columbia Valley association, pointed out that the situation on the Columbia compared somewhat closely to that on the St. Lawrence. "There they are going ahead until they meet an obstacle, then finding ways of surmounting the obstacle," he explained. "In my way of thinking, navigation and power development go hand in hand. Industries in the electro-chemical field and others using huge blocks of power would locate near the sources of power. Raw products would be hauled to them and the finished product from them.

"Development of the Columbia would mean prosperity for all. It would make Portland the great center of the northwest. We spend thousands fighting to obtain and maintain a preferential rate from what is a small spot on the map compared to the area that would be ours through improvement of the river. Building up of navigation and industry on the river would be to the advantage of the railroads just as it has been elsewhere."

Dodson pointed out that while every other section of the country had gone ahead in inland waterways development, the upper Columbia has remained untouched.

"We have had to struggle each inch of the way," he said. "We have had to plan to start from. We have been grinding away in a cold quiet way trying to get results. It will take engineering talent of the highest order to determine with finality the way that is soundest economically for permanent development."

Varney Passenger Service Is To Be Extended To Seattle, Tacoma, Spokane

Pasco.—On May 15th, Varney Air Lines inaugurated a passenger service over a portion of its main lines, Portland to Salt Lake City. It was decided by officials of the company at that time that no passengers would be carried on the Seattle, Tacoma, Portland or the Spokane Pasco hops. Popular demand has changed this. Mr. L. D. Cuddeback, vice-president of the Varney Company, announces that passenger equipment would be placed in operation sometime during the forepart of July between Seattle Tacoma and Portland, and Spokane and Pasco. Daily passenger service will be offered to connect with the portion of the lines already offering passenger accommodations, Portland to Salt Lake.

This addition to the Varney service will give people of the Puget Sound section as well as those of the Spokane and Inland Empire section a direct air service to the far east. The Varney ships will connect directly with the Boeing tri-motor service at Salt Lake City. This service extends on through to Chicago. At Chicago it is possible to get any number of directions by air over the various routes using the windy city for a terminus.

The name of the service out of the Northwest will be, The Night Mail "Business Man's Special." The passengers will be carried on the regular mail schedule which leaves Seattle 3:40 p. m. and Tacoma 4:00 p. m. daily. The Business Man's Special will depart from Spokane 5:45 p. m. daily. This section will arrive at Salt Lake 2 a. m. and Chicago the following evening, 6 p. m. This is approximately a 24 hour service to Chicago. The westbound will leave Salt Lake 10:00 p. m., and arrive in Spokane 4:15 a. m., Tacoma 7:35 a. m. and Seattle 7:50 a. m. the next morning.

Everything In Shape For McKay Lake Regatta; Has Many Speeders Entered
Pendleton.—Through co-operation received from the Umatilla county roadmaster's office, officials of the second annual American Legion Water Regatta were assured that the road leading from the highway to McKay Lake would be in the best of condition to receive the hundreds of cars which will travel it tomorrow and Sunday. This has been one of the big problems of the regatta officials, and they are highly pleased at the action taken on the part of the road department. Besides removing the large rocks from the road, it will be thoroughly sprinkled both days of the meet.

Due to the lower level of water in the lake this year, cars will be permitted to park along the lake front where they may have an excellent view of the events on the one mile oval course.

Plenty of entertainment will be provided between races to hold the interest of the large crowd. Harold Brock, chairman of non-competitive events, announces that he has lined up some of the best water performers on the Pacific coast for the two days. Foremost among these performers is Axel Englund, of Astoria, Oregon, who will present his great boat jumping act each day of the meet. This act consists of piloting his boat over a specially constructed hurdle, from which the boat and driver leap twenty five or thirty feet before striking the water.

He made no announcement whatever prior to the primaries and was not a candidate, but his name was written in on the ballots in both counties, without any solicitation on his part, giving him the nomination.

FLOURING MILL BURNS TO GROUND

Walla Walla.—Two hundred thousand dollars went up in the smoke when flames ate their way through the Northern Flour mill and elevator, leaving the two buildings and their contents a great heap of smouldering black embers.

Presumably starting from a hot casing in the main milling room, fire completely destroyed the mill. The fire started about 3:30 in the west end of the mill and when first noticed, was entirely beyond control. The loss estimated at from $200,000 to $225,000 by the owners, included 75,000 bushels of wheat and 5,000 barrels of flour in addition to the plant. The loss was fully covered by insurance.

The fire department was called and made a record run to the location, only to find that the flames had spread throughout the main mill building and well into the warehouse on the East side, where approximately 5,000 barrels of ground flour were stored. The flames spread very rapidly and soon endangered all surrounding property and set fire to the company grain elevator south of the main building.

Roofs on the nearby houses caught fire and several of those residing closest to the mill took their belongings out of their homes fearing spread of the flames. There was little damage to these houses, however, the U. S. Montgomery home being the only one to actually take fire and prompt work prevented anything more than a few holes in the roof of that structure.

The fire reached its greatest intensity about 4:30, an hour after the alarm was given, but with the start of the big pump on the No. 1 fire engine, the flames commenced to recede. Sparks and burning particles were scattered all over the surrounding country by the light breeze starting a number of small grass fires.

History of the mill dates back to 1868, it being built by Ritz and Schnebly. Later it was sold to Welch and Schwabacher, and in 1880 to De ment brothers who operated it until a few years ago when it was sold to the Northern Flour Mills company, with headquarters in Portland.

The mill was one of the largest in this section of the country with a capacity of 600 barrels a day, besides the by-products. Its warehouses were large enough to store 50 carloads of flour.

Improving Springs Road
A crew of men are at work near Bingham Springs, widening the road at points where it runs between the Umatilla river and bluffs. Considerable blasting is being done.
