Bill to Substitute Volstead Act in Oregon Turned Down Flat.

Salem .- With only Senators Upton, Moser and Strayer interposing their votes in its defense, the Upton bill which sought to submit to the people of Oregon the question of substitut-ing the Volstead act for the Oregon bone dry law was killed by indefinite postponement Monday afternoon. Twenty-six senators voted to kill the bill. Senator Spaulding was absent. Loath to pass up the opportunity pre-sented by galleries packed with proponents and opponents of the meas-ure, members of the senate talked for two and one half hours on the bill before submitting it to vote.

Senator Upton, author of the bill, declared that he had known all along that the five members of the committee were opposed to his measure and admitted that he did not expect much support for the bill at the hands of ever, that the people of Oregon were entitled to an expression of sentiment in the legislature on the question involved in his measure.

The difference between the Volstead act and the Oregon bone dry law, Upton explained, was to be found in the fact that under the federal act physicians were permitted to pre-scribe liquors, which was forbidden under the Oregon law. The federal act also permitted the manufacture of wine and beer in the home up to a certain alcoholic content.

Under the federal act it was permissible to have and serve in one's own home, "home brew," wines and other liquors without fear of molestation from the law-enforcing agencies. The only way to sound out sentiment of the people of the state on the prohibition question, he declared, was by submitting to them some such measure as the one he was sponsoring. He prophesied that while he might not return to another session, the next legislature would find a majority of both house and senate ready to vote to submit such a measure to the people. His principal object in in-troducing the bill at this time, ke ex-plained, was in order to give "the great unorganized majority who now indukce in the use of lignor" an onto vote to submit such a measure to

Charged with the hammer murder of Frank Smiley in a lonely cabin near Yakima, Wash., last Christmas eve, Charles O. Baker, 54, and his wife, Mabel, are held in separate Southern California jails awaiting the arrival of officers from Yakima, according to press dispatches. Baker was captured as he went to visit his daughter at a Los Angeles apartment house.

The capture, deputies said, was made possible by an alleged confession of Mrs. Baker, who was arrested at Riverside last week and has since been incommunicado in the Riverside county jail. Her arrest was kept secret while Los Angeles deputies searched for Baker.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Baker are wanted for the murder of Smiley, according to circulars sent to Riverside by the sheriff of Yakima county. They are alleged to have beaten Smiley to death in a rum war battle. Smiley had a police record at Walla Walla as a bootlegger. His body, wrapped and tied up in sacking, was found near a canyon road in the Mabhis colleagues. He did believe how- ton section a few days after the murder. Identification of the body revealed the Bakers as suspects, as Smiley had been living with them. They had disappeared when warrants were issued at Yakima, but presumably Yakima officers succeeded in tracing them to Los Angeles county.

Gasoline Cowboy Bill Is Amended by Oregon Senate

Salem .- Twenty senators threw their support to the amended gasoline cowboy bill Tuesday afternoon and saved the measure from death as its opponents had desired. Only 10 members voted to kill the bill, which was placed on final passage after nearly two hours of debate. The measurehouse bill No. 148-amends the act of 1929 so as to exempt the small farmer and stock man from the provisions of the bill requiring a dealer's license for persons offering meat for sale.

The bill ----- 'ng to Senator Upton, was passed two years ago in response to demands for protection of the small farmer and stock grower from the thievery of organized gangs. During the past two years there have been 32 prosecutions as a result of this act and stealing of livestock has almost ceased. The amendments to the act provided by the bill now before the senate, he explained, only sought to relieve the farmer who wanted to peddle his own products from the necessity of getting a liense.

Senator Strayer told his colleagues has been bombarded by the farmers of his county urging the repeal of the entire act. Strayer presented a petifarmers of Baker county asking for the abolishment of the act. Strayer directed his particular attention to a section of the old act which increases the salary of the state veterinarian by $600 a year, which he declared to one of the principal excuses for the enactment of the measure. Administration of the act during the past two years, he pointed out, had cost $32,000. Senator Eddy declared that the act of 1929 had worked exactly the hard-ships on the small farmer that he had foreseen and warned against. The bill he charged, had been put through the legislature by the lobbying activities of "a certain state official" who stood any complaint that had arisen as a

Salt Lake City .- The faithful cayuse, which once carried the North American Indian to battle and dragged his wickiup, has again come to his rescue-this time to provide him with succulent sirloin steaks. The extension service of the United States Indian service here has made known the results of experiments at the Standing Rock agency at Fort Yeates, North Dakota, in the use of horse meat by the Indians.

So popular were hamburger and sirloin steaks from a yearling colt that other animals were furnished to the Indians desiring the horse meat. More than 500 of them have sampled the new diet and given it their aped at least $35,000 in stolen stock to proval, the report from L. C. Lippert, the Indian agent, said.

Waterways Effort for Navigation.

Pendleton .- Members of the Columbia Valley association, gathering in annual session here Monday, heard a review of the work done in the annual report of Dr. Clark Black, president, and special stress laid upon the matter of getting an appropriation of $850,000 for development of the navi-gation project through the next session of congress.

This work was suggested in a report to the war department in 1922, but was not approved then. A request has been made that the report be reviewed by Major O. C. Kuentz, district engineer at Portland.

The association was also made cog-nizant of the unconfirmed rumor that reduced freight rates ordered by the interstate commerce commission may not go into effect until June 1.

Roy Ritner of Pendleton also called attention to the fact that the 70-car freight measure before the Oregon legislature might prove an argument for the roads in that it would increase operating costs.

Delegates from Oregon, Washington and Idaho were present for the session and a large number of proxies were in the hands of Dr. Black and R. H. Kipp, secretary. During the af-ternoon session, which was open to the public, Major Kuentz spoke on the development of the Columbia and its tributaries, and Harry Mitchell, district manager of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, spoke on inland waterway development in Europe and the Southern states.
