A WATER SUPPLY MAYBE FOR POOL

Completion of Wing Extension at Present Is Increasing Flow.

The completion of the new extension of 150 feet on the wing feeder to the city well has perceptibly increased the flow of water, and Mayor Watts stated that if the increase is permanent, it would be possible for the city to supply water for the Legion swimming pool at city park this season.

The extension was completed at a total cost of $1,187.95 to the city. A force of men was employed for 22 days in the work of excavating, putting in lumber for cribbing and filling in the dirt covering. The cost also includes the removal of surplus dirt adjacent to the fill.

The Preston-Shaffer Milling company ran extra wires to a motor used in pumping the water from the excavation during the work and generously furnished the electric current without cost during the entire period of operation.

The lumber used for the cribbing was given a tar bath for preservation purposes, and for a time the city water was slightly flavored with tar, but this gradually disappeared.

All bills for labor and material were filed with the recorder in time to be acted on by the council at its regular meeting, Monday night. Bills from all sources for the month March as allowed by the council, follow:

Meier Says That Meetings Must Be Held At Salem

Salem.—The meetings of all state boards and commissions coming within the jurisdiction of the executive office will hereafter be held in Salem, except in extreme cases where the application of such a general policy would work undue hardship or impair the efficiency and increase operating expenses of particular departments.

Governor Meier told the Capitol Journal in commenting upon his action in summoning the newly appointed members of the game commission to meet here for organization purposes next Monday.

At the same time the governor announced that to the extent of available facilities for housing them, and where the advantages of such centralization are not over-balanced by other economic considerations, the offices of all boards and commissions subject to his control will be centralized in the capital, the new state office building and the newly acquired building adjoining the state house grounds.

Practical Demonstration of Use of Chlorate Weed Killers Are To Be Made

Practical demonstrations of the use of chlorate weed killers will be given in this county on Wednesday, April 15, at 1:35 p. m. by the Chipman Chemical Engineering Company, of Boise, Idaho, it is announced by Walter A. Holt, county agent.

The demonstrations will be staged in Pendleton at the corner of Court and Ash streets, which is opposite the Round-Up grounds, under cooperative arrangement with the State College Extension Service and will give the correct and most efficient methods of applying these chemicals for the destruction of weeds.

Chlorate weed killers are not entirely new, yet success with this means of disposing of weeds has now reached a point where it can be declared efficient. This success has been attained through experimentation in methods of applying the chemical, mixture of the solutions and other mechanical details. It has been definitely determined that proper mixture, correct adjustment of the equipment and a thorough coverage of the foliage to be treated, will increase the effectiveness of the weed killers as much as 50 per cent.

The Chipman Company is in a position to give the benefit of its experimentation to all persons interested in the eradication of weeds, annual losses from which are estimated to be larger than the farmers' tax bill for the entire country.

Complete equipment will be on hand for the demonstrations and a general discussion of the entire weed problem and its solution will be given. A loud speaker will be installed so that all may hear. Experts will be in attendance to answer all questions. Weed mounts will be on display. Persons having experiences with unfamiliar weeds are requested to bring samples to the meeting where they will be identified.

MEIER OUSTS ALL GAME DIRECTORS

New Commissioners Named—Baker Man for Eastern Oregon.

Salem.—Governor Meier cleaned house in the state game commission, when he named five new members to replace the old commission.

The commissioners whose appointments were effective Wednesday are Marshall Dana, Portland; Dr. J. C. Vandever; M. F. Corrigan, McMinnville; Dr. Irving Vining, Ashland, and Carl Sylven of Baker.

Members of the outgoing commission are J. E. Cullison of Portland, Wilford Allen of Grants Pass, David Evans of Eugene, Harry Poole of Klamath Falls and S. R. Thompson of Pendleton.

Corrigan was formerly a member of the game board. He was ousted in May, 1930, by Governor Norblad, and replaced by David Evans of Eugene. Evans now is ousted to again make room for Corrigan.

"I have consulted with each of these men prior to his appointment on the commission. I consider each well qualified for his position and to carry out the policies of my administration," the governor said. "Their appointments were in line with my platform—to take the game commission out of politics and make it a business administration."

The governor enumerated the abilities of each new appointee:

"I consider Corrigan an excellent business man and well qualified and experienced for game commission work.

"Dr. Vandever is a highly regarded sportsman and should well represent Central Oregon.

"Marshall Dana has long been interested in game commission work and policies.

"Dr. Vining is a good business man and has outstanding ability to tell the world about Oregon's game resources.

"Sylven is an excellent business man."

Sylven draws the short term on the commission, his appointment expiring February 25, 1932. He succeeds S. R. Thompson.

Vining's term will expire February 25, 1933.

Vandever's appointment is effective until February 25, 1934. He succeeded Poole.

Corrigan replaced J. E. Cullison and will serve until February 25, 1935. Dana drew the long term, to February 25, 1936, succeeding Allen.

Education and the State

By Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall
President, University of Oregon

Editor's note: This is the first of a series of five articles written on education by Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University of Oregon.

If I can tell you very frankly the thing that I think would help higher education most, it would be that the sending of your children, particularly for the first time, to the University should be accompanied by a certain informal family ritual. No single step that your child will take will perhaps be as significant as when he first leaves home and starts to the University. Here he must become his own judge in the use of his time, in the choice of his friends, and in solving the many other difficult and intricate problems that will confront him in an endless and confusing array. He will differ with other people representing conflicting philosophies of life, and in his youth and immaturity amidst these conflicting and baffling problems he must pick his way.

I have seen students faced with these perplexities write for advice and direction to their parents, and I have seen these same parents, not realizing the tragic need, attempt to answer their children's cry of need with some meaningless generality or trite moralism which drove the students into their shells and made them feel that they must depend upon their own resources, rather than upon the help and counsel of their homes.

Problems Not Simple

The problems which your children face are not simple problems that can be solved with the easy-going generalities of a generation ago. They require an intimate understanding of modern social life and knowledge of the University traditions and experience and an understanding of the particular son or daughter that is involved. We hope through these organizations of the dads and mothers that the basis of such understanding will be formed, that visits to the University will become more frequent, and that a close and intimate relationship between parents and children at the University may be established and maintained.

Still another way in which we are trying to reach the emotional lives of the students upon the campus is by the development of an appreciation of beauty. We are trying to do this through music, drama, literature, painting, sculpture, and all the fine arts. One of the finest buildings upon our campus will be the Fine Arts Building. One of the student activities that the University is pushing the most vigorously is the development of a University concert band with a series of band concerts open to the students. We are doing the same thing with the University orchestra, with Sunday afternoon concerts and vesper services in which programs suitable to the occasion and of unquestioned beauty are rendered. Our work in drama and in literature we wish to emphasize more and more. We believe that a development of artistic appreciation has a very definite and vital relation to the spiritual realities of life.

Spiritual Values Important

A university where the spirit of beauty and the appreciation of nature permeate the atmosphere of the institution so that the student body cannot escape its spiritual and ennobling influence is bound to produce graduates who are trained not only in techniques and professions, but who are also imbued with a sense of spiritual values which will enrich their lives, ennoble their characters, and give a new creative direction in the development of their careers.

To this end I have been interested particularly in the development of the general courses in literature, in our School of Architecture and Allied Arts, and in the School of Music. I have wanted every student to have an opportunity to learn to love and appreciate the artistic work of creative masters, not because I want them to be artists, but because I wish to see their emotional life directed along the highest lines of beauty and appreciation, rather than to find expression in things that are cheap and tawdry.

It is to be hoped that in this short statement you will get a more adequate understanding of the nature of our educational program at the University, and of the ways and means by which we are seeking to train our sons and daughters for the problems of life. We are trying to do this in an experimental way. We realize that the last word has not yet been said as to the best methods for training character, developing ideals, and creating effective habits of intellectual behavior. Each year we are conducting experiments in these various methods trying to measure the relative strength or weakness of the different methods that are employed. The only thing that does not change is our fundamental objective of giving to our students the finest intellectual and spiritual preparation for life. The means of accomplishing this will be changed from time to time in the light of scientific investigation as we shall continue to seek for more effective means of executing the ideals toward which we strive.
