With the unusually large crop yield in the Beaverton section business ought to liven up very perceptibly this fall. Crops of all kinds were never better, this with the fair prices assured, should make our town a very busy place during the remainder of the year at least. The movement in the real estate branch of business is tending upward with a prospect of something doing in that line this fall and winter. Of course, no one expects a general revival of business on any extensive scale during these unsettled times, but to say there is reason to look forward to a betterment of the conditions locally the next few months is not exaggerating the situation here. Beaverton being so fortunately situated in such a splendid agricultural section will be one of the first to note betterment of conditions.

It seems that Germany has entirely abandoned her former submarine policy—or rather has changed it to conform to the rules of international law—and expresses a willingness to make reparation for the Arabic incident, which Germany claims was in violation of late instructions given to submarine commanders, and which instructions have been given since the incident of the sinking of the Lusitania. This would indicate that trouble brewing between the United States and Germany for some months past, will soon be adjusted amicably.

The Chamber of Commerce met Saturday evening to again take up the matter of good roads in Beaverton. The rainy season will soon be here again, and the Progress road in the southern part of town, also the road leading north from the mill need rocking to put them in condition for the winter travel. A special road tax will be necessary to make the improvement. Last fall this district voted down a proposed special tax and was therefore left without funds for the work. Now if these roads are repaired it will be necessary for the people of the district to vote a special road tax of about 7 to 10 mills. Will they do it? The matter will be brought up soon for their decision.
