THE SILO COST AND SAVING
Practical dairymen who are silo users say that the silo on the farm means a saving of 8 to 10 cents a pound in the cost of producing butterfat, beef feeders say it saves from $1 to $1.50 per hundred pounds in producing beef, and feeding experiments at experiment stations bear out these statements. On this basis ensilage under normal conditions is worth $4 a ton. With an increase of 50 per cent in feed price it is worth $6 a ton. Reports of 30 farmers whose records allow the compilation of accurate data, show an average cost of $2.75 a ton for corn ensilage, including the following factors incidental to production: land rental; cost of fertilizer and its application; preparation of the seed bed, cost of seed, planting, cultivation and harvesting; interest and depreciation on machinery and silo. The supplementary and replacement value and beneficial physical effects bring the value of silage higher.
The inadvisability of doing without a silo seems to be more important than the question of whether or not to build a silo. Estimates based on inquiries to this office and the offices of the county agricultural agents, indicate that 800 to 700 silos will be constructed this season. In anticipation of the need of timely and helpful suggestions to the many prospective builders reliable information has been prepared by O. A. C. under guidance of experience.

THE BEAVERTON CLAY MANUFACTURING CO.
(By Mrs. M. A. GIBSON.)
[Solely for Plaintiff.] The following is a list of names of persons who have pleasure in publishing the same:
Soldiers of the Blue and Gray.
Where no thought of battle lingered.
For all strife had passed away.
Now as brothers there they gathered,
Landed to a common place;
Where no battle call should reach them,
Neither sorrow, grief nor pain.
They had met at times in battle,
Fate to lose in carriage wild,
Where the shot and shell were flying,
Where grim death around them smiled.
Each one thought their cause the righteous,
Each one fought to win or die.
And they loved the flag they honored,
Betwixt hope and courage high.
Years go by, all strife is ended;
Peace is hovering o'er the land;
North and South again united,
Brothers clasp a brother's hand.
In that Southern grave yard gathered
On a bright and memorable day,
Mothers of the boys there sleeping,
Soldiers of the Blue and Gray.
Flowers they brought in great profusion,
Flowers of every hue and name;
They bedecked each grave before them,
Giving Blue and Gray the same.
For their hearts were broken, bleeding,
And they knew each brave one there,
Buried in that Southern grave yard,
Had a mother's love somewhere.
Had a mother who was waiting,
By a fireside day by day;
Watching for her boy's returning,
Wondering at this great delay.
And they placed the wreaths above them,
Laurels crowning each dear mound;
North and South again united,
By a sweeter tie were bound.
And this day, we'll all remember,
'Tis most fitting and sublime;
That its record should be golden,
Made a record for all time.
