Hillsboro Man Found Dead.

The body of George A. Webb well known throughout the state as a singing evangelist, was found in his bed Sunday afternoon at his home in Hillsboro. He was last seen Thursday, and the condition of the body indicates that he died that night. He was partly clad, and is supposed to have fallen as he was disrobing for the night. Mrs. Webb is visiting with a brother near Baker, Ore., and her husband expected to join her in a few days.

He had been living alone in his home, and when his absence attracted attention the house was entered and the body found.

Grange Meets.

Beaverton grange met last Saturday in their hall with a fair attendance in the forenoon and a full attendance in the afternoon. The forenoon was mainly taken up in discussions and the Grange voted to join the Washington County Development League.

At noon there was lunch. The lecture hour was open session and Mr. Long of Hillsdale gave a very interesting talk on the distribution of highway funds. He scored the present method severely; telling of the immense waste or more properly speaking, the big steals.

Mrs. Dunbar of Portland, Sec. of the Association for the prevention of Tuberculosis, gave a very instructive talk on the subject. Miss Plummer gave a talk on the issues concerning prohibition and the methods being employed to defeat it. A committee was appointed to keep in touch with the committee of 100 in Portland, whose duty it is to report all the latest developments relative to the prohibition question. From appearances the grange is one hundred per cent outright prohibition.

St. Mary's Home has been a bee hive of industry in many ways this spring, much new ground has been put under the plow, large crops planted, new wire fences built and new bridges across the Beaverdam will soon be under way.

Having the road rocked between here and Skookumville will mean much to Beaverton business men this winter—"give the farmers a chance to come to town."
