Francis Robinson and his sister, Mrs. Nellie Peters, of Banks, were business visitors in Beaverton over the week end.

For several years past the crop prospects have not been so good as they are this season. The protracted rains have left the ground with the necessary moisture and eliminated the dry spell which has usually occurred in the late spring months. Consequently the grains and timothy are producing heavy crops, and this fall will find the granaries and barns crammed to the limit with the summer's production. At present haying is just beginning, but already one may see large fields thickly dotted with haycocks.
